Court Rejects Two Efforts To Deprive Black of Seat

Supreme Court Action.

Motions to bring two suits against the seating of Justice Hugo L. Black on the Supreme Court were dismissed by the court yesterday, though some lawyers held the door was still open for another attack on his appointment.

The court agreed to review a case on whether the national labor relations act is applicable to the shipbuilding industry and another on the Administration's gold clause repudiation. It will pass also on whether the Justice Department may proceed with action to dissolve the Aluminum co. of America. Page 2.

Attorney General Cummings, in an address, hit at numerous historic decisions of the court which he said had thwarted needs of those times for periods as long as 20 years. Page 2.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Whether the Supreme Court, in dismissing motions to bring two suits challenging the right of Justice Hugo L. Black to his place on that tribunal, yesterday wrote finis to such attacks on the validity of his appointment was a subject of lively speculation among lawyers last night.

One school of lawyers contended that the high tribunal had closed the door on further legal attacks on Justice Black and has assured him a clear title to a place on the court. Another group, however, pointing to a phrase in the court's opinion, contended its doors had been left slightly ajar for instituting another attack on the constitutionality of his appointment.

Neither of the proceedings dismissed yesterday by the Supreme Court was grounded on Justice Black's membership in the Ku Klux Klan, which outside of the tribunal has been charged as a disqualification. The motions dismissed were brought by Albert Levitt, former assistant to the Attorney General, and P. H. Kelley, a Boston lawyer.

Vacancy Questioned.

Each raised constitutional questions regarding the Black appointment. Both lawyers contended that since Justice Willis Van Devanter had retired—and not resigned—from the court, there was no vacancy for Justice Black to fill. Levitt also contended that the former Alabama Senator was ineligible for appointment to the court, if a vacancy did exist, because the emoluments of the justices of the tribunal had been increased in Justice Black's term in the Senate through passage of the Supreme Court retirement act last March.

The court did not pass on the merits of these contentions. It ruled that neither Levitt nor Kelley had demonstrated that he was directly interested in Justice Black's appointment in such manner as to entitle him to bring such action.

With Justice Black refraining from participating in the decision of the issue raised by the Levitt and Kelley motions—indeed, he has refrained from participating in any cases decisions on which the Court so far has announced—the tribunal handed down its unanimous opinion a minute after noon.

Before a jammed courtroom and with interest in the decision running high, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes seemed fully alive to the drama of the duty he was about to perform. He slowly rested his elbows on the desk before him.

Ogden L. Mills Dies; U. S. Leaders Grieve

OGDEN L. MILLS, former Cabinet officer who died yesterday, as he appeared at his desk while serving as Secretary of the Treasury.

Secretary of Treasury Under Hoover Stricken at 53; Was Aristocrat Who Devoted Life to Nation.

By Sidney Olson.

An aristocrat who devoted his life to the service of the Nation, Ogden L. Mills, former Secretary of the Treasury, died suddenly yesterday in the family's old brownstone town house in New York City.

Mills, who was 53, an outstanding antagonist of the New Deal and a hope of the conservatives, was stricken at the peak of his powers.

He died of a heart attack—coronary thrombosis—at 11:39 a. m.

The solidly built, commanding Mills followed in death as in life his old friend and chieftain, the late Andrew W. Mellon, who died two and one-half months ago at the age of 83.

It was the aged and astute aluminum king who saw great possibilities ten years ago in the brilliant, wealthy young Republican Representative from New York.

Mellon, then in his second four years as Secretary of the Treasury, and at the peak of his reputation as "the greatest Treasury Secretary since Alexander Hamilton," prevailed on President Calvin Coolidge to appoint Mills Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Mills had given up his Congressional seat to run unsuccessfully for the governorship of New York against Al Smith, who piled up a huge New York City majority against Mills' heavy up-State vote.

Union Labor's Split.

The A. F. of L. convention voted authority for its executive council to expel unions which have joined the C. I. O., but urged the rank and file of the C. I. O. to repudiate John L. Lewis and return to the federation.

Lewis and his C. I. O. leaders were considering the stand to be taken on a proposed economic boycott of Japan. At their Atlantic City conference they were advised the C. I. O. now has 4,000,000 followers. Page 7.

Expulsion Power Voted.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Oct. 11.—The American Federation of Labor convention, by a vote of 25,616 to 1,227, gave the federation's executive council power today to expel John L. Lewis' C. I. O. unions.

The convention decided, however, to leave the door open for the rebels' return to the A. F. L. by delaying a major campaign to destroy the C. I. O. unions and continuing to hold out the olive branch of peace.

The vote followed a plea for the rebel unions to "come back home" from William Green, A. F. L. president.

"If any of one these (C. I. O.) organizations comes to the door, it need not come with its hat in its hand. We'll be there to welcome them and embrace them," Green said.

In the resolutions report adopted, the committee warned political leaders that the A. F. L.'s political strength hereafter would be used against any candidate "who would in any way favor, encourage or support the C. I. O."

It called upon both politicians and employers "to decide whether to submit themselves to the evils of a dictatorship which is no less repugnant because it springs from greedy leaders of labor who have foresaken their trust."

Usually well-informed sources said the door to peace was left open because A. F. L. leaders expected the International Ladies Garment Workers, one of the largest C. I. O. affiliates, to desert John L. Lewis' camp and to return to the A. F. L.

"We cannot believe that the membership of the Ladies' Garment Workers International Union can long continue to give their approval to the actions and policies of the C. I. O.," the lengthy committee report said.

The committee appealed directly to the rank-and-file members of the United Mine Workers, the Amal-

Fair and Warmer Followed by Rain For D. C. Today

Despite reports of snow in northern Virginia, the mercury in Washington climbed from a chilly 44 at 6:15 yesterday to a comfortable 63 recorded at 3 p. m. The Weather Bureau, however, forecast colder weather for tonight.

Although too early to predict approximate temperatures, the forecaster said the mercury probably will begin falling tonight and may continue downward to make tomorrow night the coldest of the year so far. Heavy frost appeared likely for tomorrow night.

Peiping, Oct. 11.—The Japanese army's conquest of the five provinces of North China tonight appeared to be near completion.

In Peiping the capture of Shihchiachuang, vital railway junction 175 miles south of Peiping, was hailed by Japanese as the beginning of the end.

Neutral military men were inclined to indorse the Japanese opinion that the last effective Chinese defense line in North China had been broken. Shihchiachuang was the last important center of resistance in Hopei. Its fall appeared to open the way as far as the Yellow River, 250 miles to the south.

It brought the Japanese legions to the railway penetrating Shansi Province, and opened the "front door" of that rich area.

Capitals in Danger.

The consensus of observers was that in the three months of its North China campaign the Japanese army had either captured or advanced to within striking distance of the capitals or nerve centers of the five northern provinces—Hopei, Chahar, Suiyuan, Shansi and Shantung.

This area, conquered or marked for conquest, is home to 80,000,000 Chinese, a population larger than that of Japan proper.

Encompassed by the 1,000-mile-long elbow of the Yellow River as it flows southward along Shansi's western border and then turns northeastward to the Yellow Sea on Shantung's coast, this region totals about 500,000 square miles.

Roughly, that is equivalent to the combined areas of Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

Menace Soviet Spheres.

The five provinces include China's richest coal, iron and aluminum resources and its best cotton and wool growing country.

They provide the Japanese army with a springboard into the vast northwestern regions adjoining Soviet Russia's spheres of influence in Outer Mongolia and Sinkiang.

All the main cities of Hopei—Peiping, Tientsin, Paotingfu, Shihchiachuang—are in Japanese hands. Kalgan, capital of Chahar, fell early in the campaign.

A highly-mobile Japanese column from Manchukuo is driving westward along the Peiping-Suiyuan railway and approaching Kwelsui, capital of Suiyuan.

Taiyuanfu, capital of Shansi, is menaced by strong Japanese forces advancing through the mountains of the north, and part of the army

Brussels Selected by Powers For China Peace Conference

U. S. Awaits Roosevelt 'Fireside Chat;' Belgium, Lacking Valuable Interests in Invaded Country, Approves Choice; Wilson, Envoy Confer.

London, Oct. 11 (U.P.).—The conference of signatories to the Washington Nine-Power Pact will be convened at Brussels to consider the Sino-Japanese conflict, it was decided today after consultation between London and Paris.

Brussels was selected because although Belgium is a signatory to the pact, drawn up to insure the integrity of China, she has no special commitments or interests in China. The Belgian government, it was said authoritatively, expressed willingness for the conference to be held in Brussels.

It was hoped the conference would get under way within a fortnight as consultations continued among London, Paris, Washington and other capitals. It was understood, however, Italy, which also is a signatory but has voiced approval of Japan's actions, has not yet been sounded out on the meeting.

Roosevelt On Air Tonight.

Belief that President Roosevelt may throw further light on the lengths to which the American government will go in the present international situation when he addresses the Nation tonight in another radio "fireside" chat was expressed in some quarters yesterday. The President will be heard over a Nation-wide hookup, beginning his address at 9:30 o'clock.

In the meantime, United States officials were prepared last night to accept an invitation to Brussels for the Nine-Power Treaty conference, though they had received no

Germany Recalls Military Mission

Chiang Loses Backbone of Staff; Italy Sends Planes to Africa.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Oct. 11.—Reliable sources tonight disclosed Premier Mussolini has ordered Italian aviation experts aiding the Chinese government to quit now that China is engaged in a bitter conflict with Japan.

This dramatic move was said to be part of an understanding reached with Reichsfuehrer Hitler, on Il Duce's recent Berlin visit, to support Japan in her struggle with China.

An order for the large Italian military mission to return home was reported to have been issued immediately after Mussolini's return from Germany.

Hitler Recalls Mission.

There are understood to be about 78 Italian aviation experts in China, headed by Col. Silvio Scaroni, former military attache of the Italian embassy in Washington.

With a German military mission composed of approximately 100 retired Reichswehr officers, the Italians have been largely instrumental in building up Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's armies.

Japan has the sympathy of the two Fascist powers, Hitler, it was reported, already has or intends soon to recall the Germans.

Planes Sent to Ethiopia.

An airplane factory built in China by Italians has passed almost entirely into Chinese hands, but a part of the planes used for instruction were Italian property. It was understood these had been ordered sent to Ethiopia.

(The German mission, headed by Gen. Baron Alexander von Falkenhausen, World War veteran, has been termed the real general staff of the Chinese army.)

Further support for the Japanese cause on the Asiatic mainland was understood to have been decided at the Hitler-Musselini meeting along with determination to push the Spanish civil war to a conclusion favorable to Insurgent Generalissimo Franco.

Japan Bans 700 "Luxuries."

Tokyo, Oct. 11 (A.P.).—An emergency law banning importation of nearly 700 "luxury" articles became effective today upon promulgation by the Japanese government. Despite the prohibition against imports of such items as woolen clothing, coal, cigarettes, liquor and candy, Japan was expected to remain one of the United States' best customers with continued heavy purchases of oil, cotton, steel and machinery, which were exempted as "urgent."

Purge Hits Head of Last Red Republic in Drive on Separatists.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Oct. 11.—Soviet Russia today announced its first direct secret election of a national legislative body will be held December 12, when a new Supreme Soviet will be named.

The new Supreme Soviet, provided by the recently ratified Russian constitution, will take the place of the Union Central Executive Committee, which in the past has held the supreme legislative and executive power.

It will be a two-chambered house, one house elected on a population basis and the other according to geographic divisions.

Another Soviet Head Falls.

At the same time the Soviet purge of "traitors" brought the downfall today of the premier of the eleventh and last republic composing the Soviet Union to have its president or premier removed from office.

The pattern of the purge began to take shape. It was disclosed that firing squads are snuffing out separatist (secession) movements along the Soviet Union's western and eastern frontiers.

Article 17 of the new Constitution says that "to every union republic is reserved the right freely to secede from the U. S. S. R.," but officials see no anomaly in the drive to stamp out tendencies in that direction.

Removal of Useyn Rakhmanoff, premier of Azerbaidjan, oil and cotton region bordering the Caspian Sea, was announced today in a newspaper published at Baku, its capital.

Britain, France Discuss Seizing Balearic Isle

May Occupy Minorca as 'Reprisal' If Il Duce Won't Quit Spain.

By the United Press.

Paris, Oct. 11.—Occupation of the Spanish loyalist Island of Minorca by British and French naval forces was discussed by statesmen of the two powers tonight as a possible means of putting pressure on Premier Mussolini to withdraw Fascist volunteers from Spain.

A "peaceful occupation" of the island, smaller of the two principal units of the Balearic group off the eastern coast of Spain, was discussed as a means of counteracting Italy's alleged occupation of the other Balearic Islands—particularly Majorca—with fleets of bombing and fighting planes and warships.

Minorca has a strongly-fortified harbor, Port Mahon.

"Reprisal" Against Duce

It was indicated by informed French sources that dispatch of the British and French warships to Minorca might be undertaken as the first "reprisal" against Mussolini's refusal to participate in discussions on the withdrawal of all foreign "volunteers" from Spain. Foreigners engaged in the civil war are estimated at nearly 110,000, of whom 65,000 allegedly are Italians.

The second stage of the "reprisals" undoubtedly would be opening of France's southern frontier to permit men, munitions and supplies to move to the loyalists.

It appeared tonight that the Brit-

U. S. Forecasts Bumper Yields For All Crops

Wheat and Corn Estimates Boosted; Cotton Leads Price Decline.

The Government's wheat and corn crop estimates were revised slightly upward yesterday, as the Agriculture Department predicted yields per acre of all farm products harvested "will average higher than in any recent year."

A 2,561,281,000-bushel corn crop was forecast, more than 12,000,000 bushels higher than expected a month ago, and an 886,895,000-bushel wheat crop, nearly 1,000,000 bushels larger than the September outlook.

But wheat and corn increases were moderate compared with the 17,573,936-bale cotton crop predicted by the Department last week, the second largest cotton growth in history, which sent prices of the staple tumbling to new lows at New York and New Orleans.

Bumper Corn Crop.

The corn crop outlook, based on conditions October 1, was an increase of 1,032,609,000 bushels, or more than two-thirds larger than

Stage Roosevelt, Out for Third Term, Vows He Will Balance Budget if It Takes 10 Years

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 11.— parody-singing "President Roosevelt" tonight announced he would run for a third term to balance the budget "even if it takes ten years"—but it was all in fun.

George M. Cohan, in his first musical comedy role in ten years, lampooned the Chief Executive in a new, lively George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart fantasy, "I'd Rather Be Right," which had its world premier at the Colonial Theater.

The authors, who wrote the 1937 Pulitzer Prize comedy "You Can't Take It With You," heaved one good-natured barb after another at the Roosevelt Administration to the evident delight of a fashionable opening night audience.

Made up mazingly like the President, Cohan at one point sang a catchy tune called "Off the Record." It went, in part:

If I'm not re-elected
I'll never fear for hunger,
I'll never fear for thirst,
I've one son with du Pont
And another one with Hearst.

My messages to Congress
Are a lot of boola boola,
I'm not so fond of Bankhead
But I'd like to meet Tallulah.

Appearing in many skits were characters portraying the President's mother; Alf Landon, who acted as her butler; Sistie and Buzzie Dall, the Cabinet, and nine bearded justices of the Supreme Court, who in one song and dance proclaimed themselves not adverse to "a little bit of not so innocent fun."

One of the big laughs came when the President at a Cabinet meeting, turned to Attorney General Cummings and ordered:

"Cummings, take down a law!"

The plot concerns two youthful lovers who want to marry but can't because his employer, wary of an unbalanced national budget, won't provide the necessary pay raise.

The President takes their plight before the Cabinet, pleading for a balanced budget and introducing Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who boasts in one song:

"But I've achieved, you must admit,
The biggest——Deficit."

Duce's Son, Heavily Guarded, Takes Tea With Roosevelt

President Roosevelt was host to Vittorio Mussolini, 21-year-old son of the Italian dictator, at a prearranged tea yesterday at the White House.

Extra precautions were taken to insure safety of the guest. A large force of uniformed police and plainclothesmen supplemented the White House guards and Secret Service men. Cameras were barred from the grounds and newsmen were not permitted to question the youthful caller.

Vittorio, dressed in a business suit and hatless, was accompanied by Italian Ambassador Fulvio Suvich. They entered the White House hurriedly, and were followed by William Phillips, United States Ambassador to Italy, and Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, who had arrived from the State Department on foot.

All four were guests of the President and stayed 45 minutes. Suvich and Vittorio then drove away. A large crowd was on hand outside the White House gates, but no untoward incident occurred.

Earlier in the day, young Mussolini visited the Department of Justice.

An attempt to picket the Italian Embassy in early morning was blocked by police, though for a moment it looked as if Washington fascists and reds might indulge in a free for all.

The picketers, less than a dozen in number, carried placards, reading:

"President Roosevelt: Don't shake hands with the son of an aggressor."

First Lady Ready To Show Windsor Greenbelt Project

Britain's royal exiles, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, will be welcome guests at the White House if they visit the United States, Mrs. Roosevelt implied yesterday at her first press conference in three months.

The First Lady, back in Washington on her birthday, said she would "be delighted" to show Edward and his American bride through Greenbelt and other Federal housing projects. She denied knowledge of the proposed visit, "except what has been in the newspapers."

Court to Hear Aluminum Co. In Trust Fight

Labor Act Application to Shipbuilding, Gold Case Chosen for Review.

By Robert C. Albright.

From a stack of litigation involving New Deal laws the Supreme Court selected two for review yesterday, turned thumbs down on a half dozen others and then agreed to hear Aluminum Co. of America arguments against Justice Department antitrust proceedings.

Disposing in five minutes of nearly 350 petitions accumulated and studied during last summer's recess, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes weeded wheat from the chaff in the court's first "decision Monday."

The court proceeded speedily to first hearings on the first case of the 1937-38 term—a case involving constitutionality of a Virginia statute imposing an entrance fee on non-Virginia corporations.

Labor, Gold Cases Chosen.

The two petitions selected for review from the many springing out of New Deal acts test whether the national labor relations act is applicable to the shipbuilding industry, and again bring before the court a review of the Administration's gold clause repudiation.

Heading the list of suits the court declined to hear were three challenges of the Government's broadened jurisdiction over commodity exchanges, a power company procedural suit, another gold clause case, a test of the municipal bankruptcy act and an action involving the 1933 "truth in securities" act.

Court hearing of the Aluminum Company of America case will determine whether the Justice Department may continue its anti-trust action to dissolve the company for alleged monopolistic practices.

To Study Philadelphia Ruling.

The appeal was made by the Aluminum Co. in an effort to prevent the Government from further proceedings in New York. The court took under review an opinion by a Philadelphia circuit court that the Justice Department may proceed with the suit aimed at dissolving the company.

The Government had charged the concern and 62 other defendants with monopoly and conspiracy to monopolize trade in aluminum and related articles. A Pittsburgh Federal District court had contended further action should be brought in Pittsburgh, where an earlier suit had been filed in 1912.

The court set hearings on the case for November 8, and announced that Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Stone took no part in consideration of the petition. No reason was assigned for their withdrawal.

TVA Wins Skirmish.

The Tennessee Valley Authority won a legal skirmish with the Georgia Power Co. as the Supreme Court refused to review a lower court order enjoining the company against taking legal action to restrain TVA operations.

The company had sought to join 18 other utilities in attacking constitutionality of the TVA's power "yardstick" activities. The company contended denial of its right to participate in the other power company litigation would result in the "wasteful duplication" of two trials. Only a jurisdictional question was involved in the petition denied yesterday, and the broader constitutional litigation, involving 18 power companies, is still pending in the Tennessee courts.

In the shipbuilding test of Wagner labor act scope, the court decided yesterday to pass on the board's right to conduct hearings to determine whether the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. and the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation engaged in unfair labor practices. Lower courts refused to enjoin the board from holding hearings in the Newport News case, but the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation was granted a interlocutory injunction against the board in the lower courts.

$17.50 Interest Sought.

Of two suits by Liberty bond holders involving the gold clause, the court agreed to hear one, brought by Arthur W. Machen, of Baltimore, to collect $17.50 of interest claimed after his Liberty bonds were called by the Treasury. The Government contended the bonds ceased to bear interest after they were called. A Federal district court ruled in favor of the Government, but the Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the ruling. The right of a bondholder to collect in gold, barred from circulation, is involved.

At the same time the court declined to hear a slightly different suit by John Ogden, of Indianapolis, to compel the Treasury to redeem in gold Fourth Liberty bonds of $6,000 face value. The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia dismissed the litigation and the high court declined to review the lower court's decision.

Other suits involving New Deal litigation which the court declined to review were:

Residential Building Revival Would Do Much to Restore Prestige of C. of C.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

If the Chamber of Commerce of the United States wishes to restore its public prestige—which, rightly or wrongly, has been impaired by President Roosevelt in the eyes of the average man—let its officers roll up their sleeves and do a first-class constructive job in stimulating residential building.

The chamber's president, George H. Davis, has announced that a building industry conference "to analyze the causes of the slowing down of residential building and to suggest means for stimulating activity in this field" will be convened here late next month or in December. Mr. Davis and his aides right now should commence making preparations to see that this conference is not just a grand talk-fest, as so many housing conferences have been, but really goes some place in a realistic manner.

There is no more important aspect in the American economic recovery picture than a revival of residential construction. Failure of such a revival to take place has been a drag on the progress of recovery. Undoubtedly this failure and the recession in housing activity which took place during the summer has been a factor in the present mild slump that the country is tasting. Certainly it has been a subject of anxiety in the mind of many persons in the financial world.

Revival of residential building is primarily a job for private industry. The Roosevelt Administration has messed with the problem for five years and has gotten no place. The word "messed" is used advisedly. In the way of constructive achievement, the New Deal's housing construction program has been the worse blot on its escutcheon. Even New Dealers admit that.

There is a tremendous waste in home construction. Former President Hoover's Commission on Waste estimated that in the building industry waste amounted to 53 per cent of the cost. The Federated American Engineering Societies estimated that of the waste 65 per cent belongs to management, 21 per cent to labor and 14 per cent to the public.

"The housing dollar," asserts the National Housing Committee, of which Mgr. John A. Ryan, the noted economist, is chairman, "buys less than any other dollar which the public spends. The clothing, food, transportation, vacation, amusement dollar gets much more in value than the housing dollar—whether spent in owning or in renting a house."

It is easy to see how mounting costs act as a depressant on the volume of residential construction. In July, 1936, the Bureau of Labor Statistics index figure for the wholesale cost of building materials was 86.9—that is, 86.9 per cent of the average cost in 1926. That figure was only slightly higher than in July, 1935, or July, 1934. A modest residential building boom was in progress in July, 1936. In that month contracts were let for 20,500,000 square feet of residential construction at a cost of $72,000,000.

In July, 1937, the wholesale price index figure for building material had gone to 96.3. In the meantime most persons were a little better off—in a better position to buy homes. Did residential building show an increase? It did not. It remained approximately stationary, with contracts awarded last July for 20,600,000 square feet of residential building at a cost—and mark this—of $81,000,000. Thus in July this year it cost $9,000,000 more—an increase of 12.5 per cent—to construct the same amount of residential space as a year previously.

As a result of rising prices, residential building has commenced to slip backward. Whereas in 1936 residential construction contracts awarded in August had a value of $100,500,000, compared with $72,000,000 in July—on approximately the same price level—such contracts in August of this year had a value of only $73,400,000, compared with $81,000,000 in July—on approximately the same price levels.

The problem is primarily one of industrial statesmanship. Concededly it is a difficult problem, but in a country which has made automobiles available for low-income classes; mechanical refrigerators available for most homes and radios for almost everyone, it is not an insoluble problem. Let the chamber of commerce bend its back over this problem and stimulate residential building in volume and Mr. Roosevelt's chilliest blasts will have no effect on it. Then the chamber can remind him it has done what he failed to do.

After five years of talk, talk, and more talk about housing, the Roosevelt Administration has built or has under construction only 27,000 family units. Even under the Wagner act, if its most rosy promises are realized, the number of family units constructed will not be much more than 40,000 units annually for the next three years—and Mr. Roosevelt, judging from his failure to name a housing administrator, even though the act were passed two months ago—seems in no particular hurry to get that program going.

Construction of 40,000 family units a year—if such a figure materializes—would be a creditable job for the Federal Government, but it would be a long way from suppling the crying need for additional housing.

A little more than a year ago the Labor Housing Conference and the National Association of Housing Officials estimated that approximately 7,000,000 family units would be needed in the next decade merely to house the increased number of families. That would be 700,000 family units a year. In 1936 only 275,000 family units were constructed.

This estimate did not take into account the need for replacements. It has been estimated that there are now 3,250,000 dwellings unfit for further use, either due to condition or location—and that many more will reach such a condition in the next ten years. Thus, by 1945 or 1946, this country could stand the construction of 13,000,000 dwelling units—or 1,300,000 a year. Again, it should be repeated, dwellings constructed last year totaled 275,000—and the figure will not be much larger for this year.

Thus there can be no doubt about the need for residential construction At the same time the country has the plant capacity and the manpower to do the job. Then why does not a vigorous housing program go forward? The answer is: the cost. Dwelling construction is and has been too costly. Hourly wages in the building trades are too high; building material is too high, and the cost of financing home construction, even though the Roosevelt Administration has helped that situation, remains too high.

Cummings Cites Court's Ability To Meet Needs

Human Requirements Must and Will Be Met, He Declares.

Attacking numerous historic decisions of the Supreme Court, Attorney General Homer Cummings last night struck vigorously at "those who apparently regard the Constitution as embalming forever the explicit and final word of wisdom."

Speaking at a banquet of the Polish National Alliance of America, held in honor of Casimir Pulaski, the Polish patriot, the Attorney General held to the same note sounded by President Roosevelt in his Constitution Day address. Cummings said the Constitution is a "human document formulated to serve human needs." The President had described it as a "layman's document" which should be adapted to modern necessities.

Cummings lashed at people "who feel a distaste for any critical debate as to its merits or its possible defects," adding, "It would be unfortunate indeed if the Constitution ever came to be regarded as so sacred that it could not be discussed."

Requirements Always Met.

He cited a number of instances in which he said "the interpreters of the Constitution and those who were seeking to apply it in a practical manner came into collision." In each case, he said, the conflict ended by meeting "the requirements of the generation in which it occurred." He said:

"Not long after the Civil War, the Supreme Court, in the so-called legal tender cases, held that the monetary system set up by the Congress, and which in part persists to this day, was unconstitutional. Had that decision stood, the devastating consequences would have been incalculable.

"Fortunately, as the result of a change in the personnel of the Supreme Court, that tribunal reversed its former decision, and the national life flowed on again."

"Needs of Times Thwarted."

The Attorney General then discussed the income tax decision, the first minimum wage decision, and the child-labor decision, emphasizing that in each case the needs of the times had been thwarted for periods as long as 20 years. Of the child-labor decision, he said:

"Whether the more liberal attitude which the Supreme Court has been exhibiting of late will result in a frank reversal, or whether nothing short of a constitutional amendment will serve our needs, time and time alone can tell."

Then, after outlining the needs of the present day, naming wage-hour legislation, protection for the farmer against price fluctuations, child-labor legislation, protection against monopoly, protection against crime, and higher living standards, Cummings declared:

"That such needs must and will be met is as certain as that we are gathered here tonight. We have but scant patience with those who believe that the Constitution is an unworkable document, and we are not moved by those who, in sheer blindness, strive to make it an unworkable document."

Roll Call Drive Speeds Reports; Success Sighted

44,284 New Red Cross Members Enrolled for Goal of 75,000.

Volunteer workers in the Red Cross annual Roll Call were urged yesterday by Marcy L. Sperry, general chairman, to send campaign reports to headquarters at once so membership reports may be completed.

Sperry said the count last night stood at 44,284 new members toward the year's goal of 75,000 by Saturday night. With memberships yet to be audited and others expected during the week, the chairman said he was confident the quota would be filled.

Group chairmen continued yesterday to instruct workers to report on progress, even though they may not have completed their canvass. Efforts this year are being made to prevent reports of memberships from arriving at headquarters after the end of the drive.

The Government group leads so far in total numbers signed, Sperry said. Gen. Fred W. Boschen, chief of Army finance, head of the group, said his workers have brought in 30,590 members. WPA workers raised its membership to 1,046, the National Resources Committee and the Federal Surplus Commodities Committee were reported to have enrolled 100 per cent.

Nurses of Walter Reed Hospital were reported by E. Barrett Prettyman to have signed up 100 per cent, representing 121 annual memberships and 3 contributing memberships. Temple Bailey, author, was enrolled by Mrs. Leonard B. Baker, one of Prettyman's vice chairmen.

Thomas J. Groom, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Associatoin, listed employes of the Metropolis Building Association and the National Permanent Building Association as having enrolled 100 per cent.

Work to Keep Faith of Public, Bankers Urged

Hecht Warns of 'Inertia' of Depression; Richmonder Stresses Research.

By the United Press.

Boston, Oct. 11.—Bankers must work unceasingly to gain and retain the public good will if they are to avoid the condemnation of depression years, former President Rudolph S. Hecht, of the American Bankers Association, warned tonight.

"It would be a tragic mistake if we were to permit the old disease of inertia to creep over our profession again," Hecht told the constructive customer-relations clinic at the association's sixty-third annual convention.

"Such a policy would be all the more dangerous," he said, "now that banking is confronted with so much new and active competition by other lending agencies, not only governmental, but private agencies with and without governmental support."

The best way to convince the public banks are the best lending agencies is "courteous, intelligent and capable service and proper educational efforts," said Hecht, who is chairman of the A. B. A. public relations education commission.

Knowledge acquired through research was stressed as a basis of building improved relations with banking customers by Jesse F. Wood, of Richmond.

"Research is the password to knowledge and the road back to the confidence of the people," he said.

Industry Exhibit Opens at Chamber

An exhibit illustrating promotional compaigns of various American industries opened yesterday in the Chamber of Commerce Building and will continue until October 15.

The material was submitted for an award by the American Trade Association executives and includes the prize-winning display of the National Lumber Manufacturers Association.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, in awarding first place to the lumber association's exhibit, said, "an outstanding feature of the association's activity was the effort made through the building industry to stimulate small-home construction."

Among other exhibitors are the American Dry Milk Association, Automobile Manufacturers Association, Nation Federation of Textiles, and National Glass Distributors Association, all recipients of certificates of honor.

8,000 Returns Due On Privilege Tax By Next Saturday

A total of 8,000 business firms and individuals in the District subject to the business privilege tax who have not filed returns have until Saturday to do so, Fred D. Allen, District tax assessor, warned yesterday.

The tax, two-fifths of 1 per cent of the gross receipts, is applicable to all business and professional persons.

Although the law provides that the personal tax may be deducted from the business privilege tax, and, as in some cases the former tax is greater than the latter, a return on the privilege tax must be filed.

President Hails Love of Liberty On Pulaski Day

Stresses Band Between U. S. and Poland at Rites for Krzyzanowski.

The common love of liberty which has united Poland and the United States in the bonds of friendship since the earliest days of this Republic, was emphasized yesterday at Pulaski Day exercises here.

President Roosevelt stressed this point in a radio speech broadcast yesterday morning from the White House. The President's words were carried to a grave in Arlington Cemetery where the body of Brig. Gen. Wladimir Kryzanowski, Polish hero of the Union Army in the War Between the States, was buried after being brought from New York.

A message from President Roosevelt was read at the Pulaski Day dinner in the Wardman Park Hotel last night. This dinner also was in commemoration of the sesquicentennial anniversary of the Federal Constitution.

The message:

"It is fitting that we should honor the eternal truths that document (the Bill of Rights) records and the type of liberty for which these Polish heroes fought—liberty not for the few but liberty for all.

"Centuries of struggle infused in the Polish people an unquenchable thirst for freedom from oppression. It is not strange therefore that such Polish patriots as Pulaski and Kosciuszko should join in our revolutionary forces in their struggle to break a tyranny which gripped the Western world.

"The predominant note in Gen. Pulaski's life was a love of liberty. In Poland he fought for the same cause to which, in America, he gave his life. He once said: 'As I could not stoop before the sovereigns of Europe, so I came to hazard all for the freedom of America.'"

Attorney General Homer Cummings again emphasized international friendship at the dinner.

International Radio Program.

An international radio broadcast which carried the Attorney General's speech to Poland and brought from Warsaw a speech by President Ignacy Mosicki of Poland, and from Warsaw a speech by President Ignacy Moscicki of Poland, and from London the words of Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, featured the dinner.

The other speakers at the dinner were Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador; Chaplain Felix Burant, U. S. A.; F. X. Swietlik, dean of the Marquette University Law School, and Maj. Benjamin T. Anuszkiewicz, U. S. A., chairman of the National Gen. Krzyzanowski Committee.

The daytime exercises of the Pulaski celebration yesterday were featured by the interment in Arlington Cemetery of the body of Brig. Gen. Wladimir Krzyzanowski, Polish hero of the Union Army in the War Between the States. The body was brought from Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, N. Y., where it was buried after Gen. Krzyzanowski's death in 1887.

The exercises at the grave were preceded by a high mass in Fort Myer chapel. The hero's son and three granddaughters, Joseph Krzyzanowski, Mrs. Maude Sage, Mrs. Helen Vondre and Mrs. Caroline Potter, had accompanied the body from New York.

There was also a New York Polish delegation of 500 members and these visitors were augmented by throngs from Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and other cities. The gathering stood with bowed heads to hear President Roosevelt's speech broadcast from the diplomatic reception room at the White House.

"Gen. Krzyzanowski, whose patriotism we commemorate today," said the President, "is another link to bind us to the people from which he came in the full tide of youthful promise when shadows lay over the land which gave him birth. It is a high privilege to bear witness to the debt which this country bears to men of Polish blood.

"Gratefully we acknowledge the services of those intrepid champions of human freedom—Pulaski and Kosciusko—whose very names are watchwords of liberty and whose deeds are part of the imperishable record of American independence. Out of the past they speak to us to bid us guard the heritage which they helped to bestow."

Adrienne Ames Submits Dress Bill in Tax Appeal

by the Associated Press.

Adrienne Ames, the movie actress, offered the Board of Tax Appeals an $8,696 dress bill yesterday in support of contentions that the Bureau of Internal Revenue erred in finding she and her husband, Bruce Cabot, were $1,792 deficient in 1934 income taxes.

Seeking a redetermination of the alleged deficiencies, the Cabots told the board the bureau not only made a mistake in disallowing Miss Ames' wardrobe expenses, but erroneously frowned on $5,170 for travel expenses and maid's salary and $1,380 she paid in English taxes.

Dining Car Heads Reveal Skill At 'Everything' in Meeting Here

100 Executives Equally Adept at Boiling Eggs or Unscrambling Liquor and Sales Tax Laws of Various States on Route.

If it takes four minutes to hard-boil an egg at sea level, how long does it take at an altitude of 6,000 feet? A dining car superintendent can give you the solution immediately. It takes 12 minutes.

In fact, dining-car superintendents have a ready answer for all sorts of weird questions, developed yesterday at the thirty-seventh annual convention of Superintendents of Dining Cars at the Mayflower Hotel. Over 100 men representing railroad lines all over this country and Canada have come here—on passes—for the three-day session.

H. A. Butler, for instance, manages the dining-car system of the Southern Pacific Railroad, so he has to keep up with the liquor laws and the sales taxes of practically every State.

"When the train enters a dry State, we lock and seal the liquor supply so that no one can get at it," he explained yesterday. "Of course the law doesn't say where a person must finish his drink, so if he buys it in a wet State he can keep on drinking it in a dry one. That's up to the individual. But he can't buy a second one."

Sales taxes make life miserable for the head waiter of a dining car. A traveler may order his meal and eat most of it while the train is still in Arizona. If he finishes it before the train reaches the State boundary he is charged a sales tax of 1 per cent. But if he still has a sip of coffee left after crossing the California line, he has to pay 2 per cent.

In planning menus, a superintendent must make allowances for the varying tastes of different parts of the country. A train routed from the extreme North to the extreme South, for instance, must carry two brands of nearly everything.

"Northerners like their marmalade rather tart, while Southerners prefer it sweet," according to Butler, who has 35 years of experience in the dining-car business to back him up. "Sutherners like heavy syrupy coffee, which Northerners won't stand for."

Waiters Go to School.

A long trip involves the difficulty of estimating how many passengers there will be to feed. Butler agreed with O. T. Hall, of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway, that the law of averages works pretty well. It is possible to figure within one chicken or one piece of steak how much will be consumed in a certain number of days, they contend.

The superintendents check on the diner service regularly, but trust their inspectors and stewards to attend to details. One of the things they are fussy about is the training of a new waiter. The Southern Pacific maintains two training cars, where novices learn the tricks of passing each other in a narrow aisle while carrying heavy trays and are taught to balance themselves when the train takes a curve.

Last night the delegates and their wives attended a dinner-dance at the Mayflower. Business sessions and sightseeing trips will keep them occupied today.

Tuskegee Choir on Air Here Beginning Oct. 17

Canceled Sunday because of conflict with the World Series broadcast, the Tuskegee Institute Choir will be heard over station WRC every Sunday, beginning October 17, from 1:30 to 2, it was said at the National Broadcasting Co. yesterday.

Answering complaints yesterday, the broadcasting firm said the choir's program last Sunday was advanced a half hour on certain stations of the N. B. C. chain; but previous commitments, coupled with the baseball broadcast, prevented WRC listeners from hearing the concert.

Ohio Wins Tax Review On D. C. Man's Estate

The Ohio tax commission yesterday won a Supreme Court review in its effort to collect an inheritance tax of $44,790 on the $1,415,313 trust estate left by James Parmalee, of Washington, who died in 1931. The court agreed to consider a judgement against the tax commission by the Court of Appeals of Cuyahoga County, Ohio.

Before his death Parmalee transferred certain stocks in trust to the Union Trust Co., of Cleveland. The tax commission fought a contention of the trustees that the interest of Parmalee in the securities were not within the jurisdiction of Ohio for inheritance tax purposes.

Y. W. C. A. Council Discusses Pay Law

The District of Columbia's minimum wage law was discussed at yesterday's meeting of the Council of Social Agencies, held at the Y. W. C. A. About 150 members were present. Russell J. Clinchy acted as chairman.

Mrs. William Kittle, chairman of the Minimum Wage Board and first vice president of the council, told how the law first was passed in 1918, declared unconstitutional five years later and put in effect once more by the Supreme Court's decision last March.

At present, she said, more than 50 per cent of Washington's women workers are receiving wages above the minimum set in 1918. The law will apply to some 40,000 women and minors here.

Other speakers were John Hanna, who represents the employers on the board, and Arthur Schoenthal, labor's representative. Miss Gwen Geach, executive secretary of the board, discussed the basis on which the board will set the minimum wage. A question period closed the meeting.

Mine Strikers Win Demands and End Week Deep in Pit

Coaldale, Pa., Oct. 11 (U.P.).—Thirty-seven anthracite miners who had spent nearly a week in the damp depths of the Coaldale colliery left the mine tonight, ending a week-old stay-down strike, after they had agreed to accept terms taken to them by Gov. George H. Earle.

The Governor went down the 1,252-foot mine shaft for the second time today at 10:15 p. m., carrying with him a statement signed by Jesse B. Warriner, president of the Lehigh Navigation Coal Co., agreeing to grant most of the strikers' demands if they would leave the mine.

Abell Granted Order Halting Son's Removal

Mrs. Pearson Restrained From Taking Boy From This Jurisdiction.

George Abell, newspaper columnist, obtained from Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Court yesterday a rule requiring his socially prominent former wife, Mrs. Luvie Moore Pearson, to show cause why she should not be enjoined from taking their 4-year-old son out of this jurisdiction until a final ruling has been made as to his custody. Hearing was set for October 20.

Mrs. Pearson and her husband seized the child, Tylor Abell, while he and his father were vacationing on the Island of Sark, off England, last August. Then followed a flight to London, where a temporary order remanding Tylor to his mother was obtained. Before the case was heard Mrs. Pearson was en route to the United States. She since has been at her home, 2820 Dumbarton avenue northwest.

In his petition, Abell said he had received notice from a Nevada court that his former wife planned to obtain a court ruling giving her absolute custody of the boy. He said the hearing was to have been held today.

Mrs. Pearson, personally served with the local restraining order, is prohibited from taking the boy away, or from furthering her Nevada action until the local court determines which court has jurisdiction.

Mrs. Pearson obtained a divorce in Nevada in 1935. Shortly afterward the couple, in an attempt to affect a reconciliation, went to New Mexico with the boy, where they remained for several weeks. In November of 1935, Abell said, they agreed to remarry, but while he was in New York on business he read in the newspapers that she had married Pearson.

Abell requested the court to award him a reasonable portion of his son's time.

Wilbur LaRoes, Sr., Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, sr., of Metuchen, N. J., celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary here yesterday at the home of their son, Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the parole board.

The couple had dinner last night at Columbia Country Club, where they were surprised with a shower of telegrams from friends in New Jersey. The younger LaRoe had arranged to have the congratulatory messages delivered at the club.

Mr. and Mrs. LaRoe were married at Argyle, N. Y., and have lived for many years in New Jersey. The elder LaRoe is 74 and his wife is three years his junior.

Ban on Colored in 1st St. Home Is Upheld by Supreme Court

The United States Supreme Court yesterday refused to review a Court of Appeals judgment against J. Dallas Grady, owner of the house at 1741 First street northwest, in which Grady was denied release from a covenant prohibiting sale or rental of his property to a colored person.

Grady contended the character of the neighborhood had changed completely since the agreement was made, and that enforcement of the covenant would work a hardship upon "certain property owners without benefiting those desiring enforcement."

Grady's property is one of eight row houses constructed at the intersection of First and S streets northwest more than 30 years ago. The covenant was included in the original deed, and released could not be obtained except by consent of owners of all eight houses.

Randolph M. Garland, owner of one of the houses, refused consent. The District Court of Appeals twice upheld the covenant in actions brought by Garland.

Elliot Lovett, attorney for Grady, said the neighborhood was entirely white when the houses were built, but is now "predominantly colored."

Seventh Street Between D and E

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The argument between the two violently-split factions of Interior Department Lodge No. 35, A. F. G. E., over the custody of some $250 that was in the treasury flared up in District Court yesterday when the newly-elected officers, E. M. Duerbeck, president; D'Arcy McNickle, vice president, and Helen Hurd, secretary treasurer, sought an order compelling the former secretary-treasurer, Eugenia Miller, to return to the lodge such funds and books as she has in her possession.

The controversy concerns entirely who the officers of the lodge really are, and actually, whether a lodge really exists. It first reached issue about ten days ago when a group of the 150 lodge members voted, 34 to 13, to sever all relations with the A. F. G. E., and have a referendum of U. F. W. A. affiliation.

This move was bucked by the officers of the lodge, namely: George A. Warren, president; F. A. Hefferman, vice president, and Eugenia Miller, secretary-treasurer. The rebellious faction then deposed the officers, substituting in their stead Duerbeck, McNickle and Miss Hurd.

Funds in the treasury were then ordered disbursed, but these were later found to have been withdrawn. They are being held until the status of the lodge is determined. The original officers have said they will take the issue to the national office of the A. F. G. E. for settlement. The rebellious faction has taken it to court.

United States Maritime Commissioner Thomas M. Woodward will preside today at the American Merchant Marine Conference in Memphis, Tenn. The conference is being held in conjunction with a three-day national convention of the Propeller Club of the United States.

Commission staff members who are in attendance at the Propeller Club convention are L. R. Sanford, chief of terminals and real estate section, and William U. Kirsch, chief accountant, who are members of the Propeller Club, Port of Washington, of which Kirsch is the secretary-treasurer.

The Civil Service Commission reports there were 848,243 employes in the executive branch of the United States Government at the end of August, 1937, a decrease of 933 during the month. The August pay roll was $126,746,808, as compared to $126,974,578 during July . . . There was an increase of employment of 483 in the District of Columbia and a decrease of 1,416 outside the District, bringing the total number of employes to 111,770, and the total outside the District to 736,473 . . . Of the total of 848,243 in the service, 63,264 were force-account employes (employes engaged in construction projects, such as building, naval vessel or road construction), 747,951 were full-time employes and 37,028 were part-time employes engaged in other activities. For the month, the compensation of part-time employes averaged $62 . . . There was a decrease of 3,846 employes in the Department of Agriculture, principally in part-time seasonal employes.

Three busy men, Secretary Ickes, Willard E. Givens, executive secretary, National Education Association, and Philip S. Rose, editor in chief, the Country Gentleman, sat in conference late last week and decided who is the star American farmer. The decision was reached, but won't be announced until the Future Farmers of America convention is opened in Kansas City next Sunday. The winner was selected from among 200,000 youths who study vocational agriculture and the 143,000 members of the F. F. A. organization.

The F. C. A.'s emergency room is moved to more spacious and altogether better quarters on the first floor. The staff is pleased over the additions of separate compartments in the treatment room for surgical, medical, physiotherapy, eye and ear, nose and throat cases and a consulting room for Dr. Richard Smith. The physician is assigned to the F. C. A. to relieve Dr. Vance Murray.

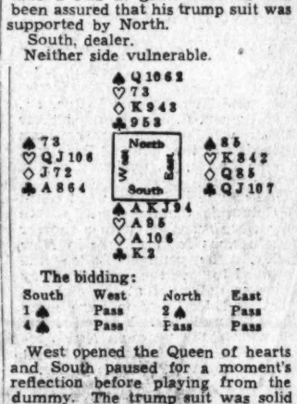
Avoidance Play.

Many players will remember that in the early days of Contract few responses were made on less high-card strength than 1½ honor-tricks. Today there are a number of bids which can be made by the opening bidder's partner, even though he may have only one honor-trick or less. North's raise to two spades in today's hand was perfectly sound in the light of modern bidding theory. The bid shows a hand with trump support and some prospect of furnishing a couple of tricks in the play of the cards. South properly felt that he was strong enough to take a stab at game once he had been assured that his trump suit was supported by North.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened the Queen of hearts and South paused for a moment's reflection before playing from the dummy. The trump suit was solid and his only losers were one heart, one diamond and either one or two clubs, depending upon the position of the Ace. Another moment or two of thought convinced declarer that careful play and a little luck might make it possible for him to discard one of his clubs on one of the dummy's diamonds. Declarer, therefore, decided that he was never going to allow East to obtain the lead, for then a lead through his King of clubs might result in the loss of two club tricks.

For this reason South refused to win the first heart trick. When West continued, South took his Ace and cashed the Ace and Queen of trumps. A low diamond was now led from the dummy, East played low, and South played his ten. West won with the Jack and could find no successful defense. No matter what defense was tried, South could cash the Ace and King of diamonds and discard one of his clubs on dummy's thirteenth diamond.

Had South won the first heart trick, he would not have been able to make his contract. When West took his Jack of diamonds, he would have led to his partner's King of hearts. A club lead by East at that point would have defeated the contract.

G.O.P. Chiefs Favor Mid-Term Meeting, Hamilton Reveals

Responding to inquiries, John D. Hamilton, Republican National chairman, yesterday revealed correspondence from numerous party leaders indicating strong sentiment in favor of a mid-term G. O. P. convention which would survey the political situation since the 1936 elections and make the party's stand known to the country. Hamilton declined to predict whether the convention would be called.

The chairman revealed that among those indorsing some kind of party meeting were John Bricker, Ohio Republican candidate for Governor last year; Wilbur M. Brucker, former Governom and senatorial candidate in Michigan; Otis F. Glenn, former Senator from Illinois; Frank O. Lowden, former Illinois Governor; William F. Beakley, candidate for Governor of New York last year; Gov. Harry W. Nice of Maryland; Gov. Francis P. Murphy of New Hampshire; Huntley Spaulding, former New Hampshire Governor; Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, Republican floor leader of the House; Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin, and Robert G. Simmons, former member of the House from Nebraska.

None of these are members of the National Committee.

Duke, Attorney For the Hoeppels, Must Serve Term

Jesse C. Duke, lawyer who was disbarred here in 1934 for "professional misconduct," must serve four months in the Federal Penitentiary at Petersburg, Va., for tampering with a grand jury in Alexandria December 7, 1936.

The United States Supreme Court yesterday refused to pass on the sentence.

The case arose out of Duke's activities as counsel for former Representative John H. Hoeppel, of California, and his son, Charles, who were sentenced to jail for selling an appointment to West Point.

The Department of Justice charged Duke planned to "conceal and harbor" the Hoeppels in a Richmond tourist home and it asked the Federal grand jury in Alexandria to indict him. Duke was alleged to have handed the foreman of the jury, Joseph L. Crupper, a note asking permission to argue against the proposed indictment. The jury turned the note over to the district attorney and Duke's trial and conviction followed.

'I Wish I Could Have Died Instead of Him,' Says Ogden Mills' Messenger, Staring at Photo

James A. Otey, 65 (right), secretary of the Treasury Department supply room, in a prized photograph taken with the late Ogden L. Mills when he was Mills' messenger. Otey will attend the funeral of the former Secretary of the Treasury.

The autographed photograph of Ogden L. Mills and himself might have been a most fragile art treasure, if you considered the way James A. Otey handled it.

"I wish I could have died instead of him," Otey said, and he sat down quickly and stared at the picture with Mills' strong signature across it.

Otey, who is 65 years old, went to work in the Treasury Department 34 years ago when Theodore Roosevelt was President, and he has been there ever since. Now he is secretary of the supply room and has an assistant and considerable authority.

Last night, though, he was just James Otey, who used to be messenger for Mills when he was undersecretary of the treasury and later went along with his boss when he became Secretary of the Treasury in the last couple of years of the Hoover Administration.

"When Mr. Woodin was made Secretary of the Treasury," Otey said, "I worked almost all night for ten days or more. You see, Mr. Mills went down to the Treasury building with him every day and every night just before the bank holiday and tried to help figure out something to do."

Otey, who lives at 1908 Thirteenth street northwest, said he will go to Mills' funeral.

"I've got leave coming to me," he said, "and I'll take that. I wouldn't stay away if I had to walk."

Ogden L. Mills, Treasury Head Under Hoover, Dies at 53 After Brilliant Services to Nation

Mills, impeccably tailored, usually in double-breasted suits, with his specially made long, brown Cuban cigars invariably clenched in his firm mouth, became increasingly important during the Hoover administration as the aging Mellon relied more and more on the energies and intelligence of the dynamic young aristocrat.

At tax hearings on Capitol Hill reporters noticed repeatedly that Mellon, while answering generally policy questions, leaned more and more on Mills for the answers on technical tax problems and for specific details. Mills, a master of detail, kept the most abstruse financial matters at his finger tips, and delighted in cutting through masses of recondite matter to the heart of the problem with clear and lucid explanations.

Appointed in 1932.

When Mellon tired of the Washintgon scene and took the post of Ambassador to England, Mills was elevated to the Secretaryship and served in Hoover's Cabinet from February, 1932, until President Roosevelt was inaugurated on March 4, 1933.

The tireless Mills had lived a rounded life, finding his "silver spoon" birth and aristocratic tradition no insurmountable handicap to the existence of an active, working financier of recognized ability, a skillful politician, a shrewd tax and budget expert, a successful corporation counsel, a soldier of distinction, a Congressman and a Cabinet officer.

He worked long and hard at his desk, averaging ten hours a day. As a director in numerous corporations, an officer and trustee in many charities and a prominent figure in Republican Party councils, he had a full-time career since the first New Deal landslide.

From these activities, threaded with occasional rounds of golf and cruises on his yacht, Avalon, Mills took time to strike blows for his definition of liberalism, a definition that held the capitalistic system must not be tampered with except for such governmental regulation as it sought of its own will.

He was a champion of free enterprise, and brooked no compromise with a planned and controlled society. He said on one occasion: "The New Deal cannot be squared with the basic principle of Americanism. It is a direct challenge to constitutional liberty. It means the end of economic freedom and ultimately the death of democratic institutions."

Mills himself was liberal in the nineteenth-century tradition. His creed, as stated in his book, "Liberalism Fights On," was considerably in advance of that enunciated by most leaders of the Republican Party and far beyond that of the Old Guard from which he had stemmed.

He was universally respected as an exceedingly able exponent of the philosophy of increased production as opposed, accordingt to his view, to that of the present Administration. He held that the New Deal's planned and controlled economy was a scarcity system, and one that would kill individual initiative and opportunity.

He startled Republican conservatives with his declaration that tariff modifications were preferable as a long-run substitute to the AAA, but appeared more orthodox in his repeated assertion that "Liberty is dead. The New Deal is fundamentally destructive of American principles"

The former Secretary of the Treasury was born of colonial stock on August 23, 1884, to Ogden Mills, banker and philanthropist and turfman, and Mrs. Mills—Ruth T. Livingston, of an old New York family—at the family's summer home in Newport, R. I.

He was privately tutored until he was 15, when he entered Harvard directly, graduating with his A. B. at the age of 19. In 1907 he secured his law degree and entered the law firm of Stetson, Jennings & Russell in New York. He rapidly won a spreading reputation as a corporation lawyer, but became dissatisfied with the narrowness of the field.

He began working in ward politics. In 1912 he ran for Congress and was defeated, but in 1914 he successfully raced for the New York State Senate, where he displayed the same interest in social welfare manifested by his "forty-niner" grandfather, Darius Ogden Mills, founder of the Mills hotels.

Commissioned in A. E. F.

In 1917 he resigned to accept a commission as a captain in the A. E. F. in France, where he was shuttled back and forth from general headquarters to such dangerous sectors as St. Mihiel and the Argonne, later being assigned to the peace conference in Paris.

In September, 1911, he married Miss Margaret Stuyvesant Rutherford, daughter of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, sr., by the latter's second marriage to Lewis Rutherford. This ended in a Paris divorce in 1920, the former Mrs. Mills later marrying Sir Paul Dukes, of England.

Mills was married again in September, 1924, to Mrs. Dorothy Randolph Fell, daughter of Philip S. P. Randolph, of Philadelphia. They had no children.

He was an Episcopalian, president of the New York Home for Incurables, trustee of the Provident Loan Society, the Metropolitan Museum of Modern Art, the Harvard Economic Society, the Academy of Political Science and the Charity Organization Society. He was a clubman and socially prominent both through his name and his personal charm.

At his death he was a director in the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation, the New York Herald Tribune Co., the Chase National Bank, the Mergenthaler Lintoype Co., the National Biscuit Co. and the Seaboard Oil Co.

Amid widespread expressions of regret at his death, flags wer halfstaffed on all Treasury and Coast Guard buildings and vessels.

Leaders Praise Mills' Devotion To Public Good

'Served With Distinction,' Morgenthau Says as Others Join in Grief.

The whole-hearted devotion of Ogden L. Mills to public service was stressed yesterday by Democrats and Republicans alike as they mourned the death of "one of our leading Americans."

Terming Mr. Mills "a man of keen and vigorous intellect and the highest integrity," his successor, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthaus, ordered flags on all Treasury agencies to be flown at half-staff until after the funeral.

Alfred E. Smith, who defeated Mr. Mills in the New York gubernatorial election in 1926, spoke of his "devotion to the best interests of his fellow-citizens," while former President Herbert Hoover mourned the passing of a "fine mind and strong character."

Leaders Grieved.

Statements of national and local political leaders and personal friends of Mr. Mills follow:

Secretary Morgenthau: "I am sincerely grieved to learn of the death of the former Secretary of the Treasury, Ogden L. Mills. A man of keen and vigorous intellect and the highest integrity, he had served his country with great distinction in civil as well as military capacity. His fellow countrymen generally will mourn this early passing of a man so well equipped and one who has participated so actively in public affairs. His departure will be most keenly felt by all who have been privileged to know him personally."

Mr. Hoover: "Mr. Mills gave his whole adult life to public service. In the New York Legislature, in the war, in Congress and in the Cabinet his fine mind and his strong character gave aid to the country."

Gov. Smith: "I have always regarded him as one of our leading Americans. His service to the State of New York and to the United States will be recorded in history as devotion to the best interests of his fellow citizens."

John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee: "The untimely death of Ogden L. Mills takes from the Republican Party and from the Nation one of its ablest minds. Long active in Republican circles in New York, he was a leading member of the Sixty-seventh, Sixty-eighth and Sixty-ninth Congresses from the Seventeenth New York District. As Undersecretary and later as Secretary of the Treasury he showed financial leadership of high ability. The country has suffered a great loss in his death."

Secretary of Labor Perkins: "Ogden Mills was a public-spirited citizen who served his State and country with distinction and honor as a legislator, Cabinet officer and soldier. His many friends are shocked and grieved by his sudden death."

Warburg Joins in Praise.

Felix M. Warburg, international banker: "He was helpful in connection with everything that was directed toward the improvement of conditions in the United States."

Former Secretary of State Bainbridge Colby: "In all his public attitude he was high-minded and disinterested."

Former Ambassador to Germany James W. Gerard: "It will be hard to fill his place in the community."

Gov. Herbert H. Lehman: "Mr. Mills was a man of very great ability and was always sincerely interested in all public affairs . . ."

Former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson: "He combined lofty courage and leadership with extraordinary intelligence and capacity. He possessed great constructive vision coupled with sound judgment."

Frank W. Mondell, Republican floor leader during the Sixty-seventh Congress (1921-23):

"The country has lost a fine and valuable citizen in the passing of Mr. Mills. . . .

"As a member of the House of Representatives, while Mr. Mills exhibited the qualities of a stalwart partisan, he could always be depended upon to take a broad and liberal view of all public issues."

Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, 1925-29: "The death of Mr. Mills is a great shock to all his friends. A very able and efficient public official, he had a distinguished career and a really brilliant mind. Mr. Mills was an expert on financial subjects and made a splendid record as Undersecretary and Secretary of the Treasury."

Maj. Ferry Kimball Heath, assistant Secretary of the Treasury, 1929-33: "Ogden Mills was a most unusual man, of very great mental capacity. He was characterized by a very strong loyalty that endeared him to a" those associated with him."

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Republican National Committeewoman for the District of Columbia: "News of his death is such a shock that there is little I can say except that he was a very exceptional man. He was generous, loyal and kind, and I admired him exceedingly. His death is a grave loss to the country and to the Republican Party. The rank and file in the party, as well as the leaders, will grieve deeply for Ogden Mills. I have lost a very good friend."

Seth Whitley Richardson, Assistant Attorney General, 1929-33:

"I am inexpressibly shocked by the news.

"I admired Mr. Mills exceedingly because, despite his inheritance of wealth, he was actively engaged in intellectual pursuits. His last three or four books showed such deep interest in government that I thought he set quite an example to his contemporaries who enjoy great wealth.

"Mr. Mills was distinctly a factor nationally rather than as a partisan in politics. His death is a very great loss."

Windsor Eats 22-Cent Lunch With Nazi Factory Workmen

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—German workman at a Berlin machine plant today ate luncheon with the Duke of Windsor, talked with him about wages and working conditions and shouted "Heil Edward" when he left.

The Duke first captured the Nazi workmen's hearts by applauding heartily the reference of Robert Ley, leader of the German Labor Front, to Chancellor Adolf Hitler as the man to whom German workers owed their jobs.

"Friend of the Workingman."

Ley also drew cheers when he described the Duke as "a friend of the workingman" during a welcoming address at the plant. The former British King shook hands with many workmen, and asked them about their pay and other conditions.

He was especially friendly with war veterans.

Democratically, the Duke ate the standard 22-cent lunch with 500 workers in the plant's mess hall.

The Duke and Duchess spent the afternoon at tea in the Ley home. They are in Germany so that Windsor may investigate working and housing conditions first hand.

Spend Evening With Friends.

The couple planned to spend the evening with several personal friends, including Charles Bedaux, who was their host at the Chateau de Cande before their wedding June 3.

Bedaux and his wife plan to accompany the Wondsors on their visit to the United States, for which they are to sail on the German liner Bremen November 6.

Friends Here Join in Tribute To Ogden Mills

Associates in Washington Mourn for Former Treasury Head.

Business and professional leaders in Washington last night joined friends and former associates throughout the Nation in expressions of sorrow at the death of former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills.

Leo A. Rover, former District Attorney: "Ogden Mills was a man of unusual ability and was highly respected in the councils of the party. I knew him quite well in Washington and had a high regard for his ability both personally and as Secretary of the Treasury. The United States and the Republican Party have both lost a very valuable citizen."

George A. Garrett, Washington broker: "Mr. Mills was a dear personal friend, and I was a great admirer of his, both personally and in respect to his extraordinary ability as a public figure. We were of different political opinions, but I deeply feel that Mr. Mills' death constitutes a loss to the country as well as to his party."

Corcoran Thom, president of the Metropolitan Club, of which Mr. Mills was a member: "Mr. Mills was a man of unusual ability and great courage. His death is a serious loss."

Mme. Cantacuzene, president of the League of Republican Women:

"It is perhaps not generally known that Mr. Roosevelt's handling of the banking crisis in 1933 was largely based on Mr. Mills' plans evolved during the winter. No credit was given Mr. Mills, but he remained in Washington some weeks, at Mr. Woodin's request, to help adapt the plans to the situation as it then existed.

"He was a great Secretary of the Treasury in very difficult times."

LIVING ROOM in OLD HED
Tiny houses and windmills work into the design of old red tapestry chair seats. Flowered old red chints draperies hang crisply over sort cross-barred cotton curtains. An occasional chair is covered in quilted beige linen - a wing chair in a rough heavy cotton combining red, green and brown. A modern sofa in sea-green mohair provides contrast - a chintz lounge chair echoes the draperies. To complete this charmingly informal but inexpensive room, oval rag rugs lie coolly on the polished floor.

Loyalists Lose On Two Fronts; Madrid Shelled

Hundreds Injured in City; Rebels Win in Aragon and Near Gijon.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 11.—Spanish insurgents today reported a major military success in northwestern Spain while the government admitted a severe setback for its armies in the northeast.

At the same time insurgent artillery batteries subjected Madrid to the most intensive night shelling the city has experienced in the 11-month siege. Several hundred persons were injured as 1,200 shells poured into the city in little more than an hour.

Hemingway Narrowly Escapes.

Ernest Hemingway, American author, narrowly escaped injury when three shells hit his hotel. His room was filled with smoke, and plaster was knocked from the ceiling.

Insurgent dispatches declared Cangas de Onis, strong point in the defenses of Gijon, on the Bay of Biscay, was captured as Generalissimo Francisco Franco's troops drove a new spearhead through the Asturian lines less than 30 miles east of Gijon.

In Madrid the government command announced its forces in northern Aragon, near the French border, confronted by an irresistible insurgent counter offensive, had surrendered the territory won in the recent government offensive on that front.

Catalan President Quits.

Paris (Tuesday), Oct. 12 (U.P.).—Luis Companys, president of the autonomous Spanish state of Catalonia, has announced that he is resigning in accordance with the Catalan constitution, which demands the resignation of the president with the convocation of a new parliament, Agence Radio, French News Service, reported from Barcelona today. Companys will not run for re-election in November, Agence Radio said, and will refuse the presidency if it is offered to him again.

Brussels Selected For Treaty Parley

official word the sessions would be held in the Belgian capital.

The Belgian Ambassador to this country, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz, yesterday had a long conference with Hugh Wilson, Assistant Secretary of State, who is handling details of American participation in the conference projected by League of Nations powers.

In the course of the day President Roosevelt received Ambassador William Phillips, who is sailing for his post at Rome tomorrow, and also saw Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles on what was reported to be routine departmental matters.

Norman Davis Confers.

Norman H. Davis, "ambassador-at-large," also returned to the Capital and talked with Wilson and others at the State Department. He has been mentioned as a possible selection as this country's delegate to the conference.

There was still some expectation President Roosevelt would discuss the international situation in his radio "fireside chat" to the Nation tonight.

In his address yesterday in connection with the reburial of Gen. Vladimir Krzyzanowski, the President echoed some of the sentiments of his speech at Chicago last week, when he proposed a "quarantine" of international disturbers of international peace.

He said the people of America are determined to uphold that ideal of human society "which would substitute freedom for force in the governments of the world," and which makes "conscience superior to brute force."

Vandenberg Assails Speech.

Meanwhile, commenting on the President's Chicago talk and the State Department's later denunciation of Japan as a violator of the Nine-Power and Kellogg-Briand treaties, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, said at Grand Rapids any American movement in the direction of "sanctions or naming aggressors, or of unilateral boycotts, would wholly nullify the Congressional mandate" on neutrality.

Vargas Hails Roosevelt Plea.

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 11 (AP).—Brazil's President Getulio Vargas told reporters tonight President Roosevelt's vigorous plea for peace in Chicago was the "voice of the American nations."

Vargas declared Roosevelt's suggestion that peace-loving nations quarantine aggressor nations "evpressed the ideas of all of us, but especially of Brazil, which has always been on the friendliest terms with the United States."

He said the state of war now decreed in Brazil was not invoked to prevent election of opposition candidates to the presidency in the national election next January 3, but to stop subversive Communist activity.

It had meen charged by opponents the state of war regulations would be used to preven any candidate from camuaigning against Vargas' regime.

which has just seized Shihchiachuang.

In the eastern sector a Japanese army has driven deep into Shantung Province along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway to reach Pingyuan, 40 miles north of Tsinanfu, provincial capital.

Shantung appears to offer the greatest chance of effective Chinese resistance. But that province, governed by Gen. Han Fu-chu, has a long coast line vulnerable to the Japanese navy.

Gen. Han, whose attitude toward China's conflict with Japan long was considered in doubt, has taken command of Shantung's resistance to Japanese invasion, but even if he receives aid from the central government neutral observers doubt his ability to stand long against the Japanese.

A Japanese communique said the attacking column entered Shihchiachuang Sunday afternoon and continued 5 miles southward to Liutsun. Supporting detachments mopped up Chinese remaining in Shihchiachuang in fierce street fighting.

Japanese officers admitted large Chinese forces which hitherto have not felt the punishing force of the Japanese attacks remained at Shentze, 40 miles east of Shihchiachuang, but they believed the debacle at the junction city will cause that Chinese concentration to collapse.

Japanese Landing Blocked.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Oct. 12 (AP). Chinese authorities reported today a Japanese attempt to extend the Shanghai battle zone to the south by a landing from Hangchow Bay had been repulsed by Chinese forces.

Reports from many cities of eastern and southern China showed Japanese air forces carried out a widespread series of raids late Monday, killing many Chinese civilians.

Canton, metropolis of the south, Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi Province and one of the main bases of the Chinese air forces, and Soochow, concentration point for the Chinese land forces behind Shanghai, were bombed heavily.

Refuse to Release A. P. Spy.

Peiping, Oct. 11 (AP).—Japanese military authorities at Paotingfu tonight refused to release Haldore Hanson, Associated Press correspondent they arrested two weeks ago as a spy.

Col. J. T. Stilwell, military attache to the United States Embassy here, was not permitted to visit Hanson despite repeated requests. Col. Stilwell went to Paotingfu during the day with a Japanese-escorted party of foreign newspapermen and officials.

Lieut. Col. Junzo Hiraoka, Japanese officer in charge of the party, assured Stilwell Hanson would be released and allowed to return to Peiping tomorrow.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Oct. 12.—Chinese sources reported today an army of 3,000,000 men is being mobilized in the south of China for an effort to "end the war" against Japan.

Gen. Li Tsung-jen, warlord of Kwangsi and one of the rebels who last year led an insurrection against the Nanking government in protest over China's failure to "take a stand against Japan," was reported hurrying northward to lay an offer of his support before Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Gen. MacArthur To Quit Service After 38 Years

Former Chief of Staff Ends Distinguished Career December 31.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff, U. S. Army, now serving as military adviser to the Philippine government, will retire December 31, Secretary Woodring announced yesterday.

In accepting the application for retirement, President Roosevelt cabled Gen. MacArthur that "your record in war and in peace is a brilliant chapter of American history." The President also said he had approved Gen. MacArthur's request "with great reluctance and deep regret."

After completing his work in the Philippines, Gen. MacArthur will return to the United States to live at Milwaukee, where he will engage in "cultural pursuits," War Department officials said yesterday.

When Gen. MacArthur leaves the service the name of the last commander of a division of the A. E. F. will be taken from the Army's active list. During the World War he served as commander of the famous "Rainbow Division," composed of National Guard units from States and the District.

Wins Medal for Courage.

Participating in nearly all major battles in which American troops were engaged, Gen. MacArthur was wounded twice and received the Distinguished Service Cross with the citation that "on a field where courage was the rule, his courage was conspicuous."

Beginning his service more than 38 years ago, Gen. MacArthur has had one of the most distinguished military careers in the Nation.

The son of a distinguished officer, Lieut. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, he was graduated from West Point in 1903, first in his class. He was appointed second lieutenant of Engineers and began his service in the Philippines.

In 1908, while on engineering duty in California, he was assigned as aide to his father and accompanied him to Asia as military observer during the Russo-Japanese war. After the close of the conflict MacArthur returned to the United States for duty as military aide to President Theodore Roosevelt.

Rivers and Harbors Expert.

He was graduated in 1908 from the Engineer School of Application, and during the next few years was connected with river and harbor work at Milwaukee and was on duty at San Antonio, Tex. He then was attached to the General Service Schools as an instructor.

In 1913 he was on duty with the War Department general staff. He served here for four years with the exception of a few months when he accompanied the American Expedition to Vera Cruz as assistant engineer officer. When the United States entered the World War he aided in organization work that preceded the transportation of the A. E. F. to France.

In 1935 Gen. MacArthur accepted the invitation of President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines to act as military adviser in the establishment of the defense of the islands. He devised a national defense plan for the Commonwealth which is being placed into operation rapidly.

Field Marshal of the Philippine Army, Gen. MacArthur also has been awarded the Grand Cross of the French Legion of Honor, of which he is a commander. He holds the Silver Star with six Oak Leaf Clusters, and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Gen. MacArthur is a commander of the Belgian Order of the Crown, and has been awarded other foreign decorations.

Housemaid Sits Motionless as Jurors Are Chosen in Death Case.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct. 11.—Three women, a young machinist and a colored laborer were seated tentatively late today on a jury to try Mrs. Anna Hahn on a murder charge in the death of Jacob Wagner, 78.

The 31-year-old former housemaid sat motionless throughout the lengthy questioning of prospective jurors. Only momentarily did she show interest in the proceedings, fixing her eyes intently upon the prospective panel members when they were asked if they objected to infliction of the death penalty.

Mrs. Hahn walked into the court of Judge Charles D. Bell smiling, but showing traces of nervousness as a crowd of 150 women stared.

As she seated herself at the defense table her husband, Philip, and her 12-year-old son, Oscar, embraced her. The father and his stepson left after the first juror was chosen. Court attaches said Judge Bell had barred all children, including Mrs. Hahn's son, from the courtroom.

Chief Defense Counsel Joseph H. Hoodin asked each juror:

"Would you be influenced in your verdict if it were shown that the defendant had a child now 12 years old born out of wedlock?"

Wagner died June 3 in a rooming house. City Chemist Otto Behr reported poison was found in his viscera. Mrs. Hahn also is charged with fatally poisoning 67-year-old George Gsellman. The indictments were returned after investigation of deaths of other elderly men.

Reds Set Back In Provincial French Election

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Oct. 11.—Complete returns from France's cantonal elections tonight showed that the provinces, conservative backbone of France, had dealt a severe setback to communism in yesterday's polling.

Of the 3,392 seats in local government bodies the Communists won only 20. While this was a gain of two, it was far less than generally had been predicted, and was a much smaller gain than the Communists achieved in the 1936 national election. They fell far short of their expectations in the northern and central districts.

However, the Communists' allies in the People's Front—which supports the national government—generally were successful. The Radical-Socialists took 32 per cent of the seats, the Socialists 13 per cent. Premier Camille Chautemps, whose Radical-Socialist group is in command of the People's Front, expressed satisfaction.

"The elections were marked by general stability," he said.

Various nationalist parties captured 44 per cent of the seats.

Run-off elections next Sunday are required for 467 seats, but results are expected to be in about the same proportions as those for seats already decided.

ARE YOU ONLY 'A THREE-QUARTER WIFE?

THERE are certain things a woman has to put up with and be a good sport. Men, because they are men, can never understand a three-quarter wife—a wife who is all love and kindness three weeks in a month and a hell cat the rest of the time.

No matter how your back aches—no matter how loudly your nerves scream—don't take it out on your husband.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

presumably arrested as traitors.

Whether they secretly have been tried and executed, exiled or merely imprisoned has not been disclosed. At least one, Panas P. Liubchenko, premier of Ukraine and one of the high-ranking politicians of the Soviet Union, committed suicide. Izvestia, the government's newspaper, had accused him of plotting to sell out the Ukraine to the Germans, Poles and Japanese.

The removal of the premier of the Karelian Autonomous Republic, Arkhipoff, became known when he was expelled from the Communist party.

Peasant Leaders Shot.

Large-scale cleanups in other frontier provinces, from Crimea to Dashkiria, have been accused of "trying to dismember our Socialist country." Leaders of a suspected peasant revolt in Georgia and the Caucasus were tried and shot. Chiefs of the Buryat-Mongolia Republic were accused of fomenting Pan-Mongolian ideas and spreading Buddhism.

Abdullah Bakhimbayeff, premier of Tadjikistan, has been denounced so violently by the Moscow newspaper Pravda that his removal is a foregone conclusion. U. Kulumbetoff, president of Kazakhstan, was deposed after police discovered he was "bourgeois Nationalist." Faisulla Khodjaeff, premier of Uzbekistan, was removed on similar charges. President Tagiroff and Premier Bulasheff, of Bashkiria, in Middle Asia, have been exposed as "base traitors."

Yugoslav Generals Move to Overthrow Week-Old Cabinet

Vienna, Oct. 11.—A group of army generals tonight organized a movement to establish a military dictatorship in Yugoslavia and overthrow the week-old cabinet of Premier Milan Stoyadinovich, according to reliable reports from Belgrade.

The army clique, led by Serbian Nationalists, based their efforts on Stoyadinovich's defiance of the Greek Orthodox Church and unsuccessful attempts to conclude a new concordat with the Vatican.

Britain, France Discuss Seizing Balearic Isle

ish and French foreign offices were agreed that Italian forces in Majorca must be evacuated or a major diplomatic and military problem will be projected. The Balearics, occupied by a foreign military force, offer a constant threat to British and French security in the Mediterranean because the island group lies in the center of major routes of colonial communications and empire defense.

It was indicated Britain and France, after cabinet meetings Wednesday, will offer Italy another chance to collaborate on the volunteers question—perhaps through the London nonintervention committee of 27 nations.

Despite assurances of solid Anglo-French co-operation in the crisis, it was apparent to observers tonight that a difference existed between the two governments over the question of reopening France's southern frontier.

Britain, it was said, has put pressure upon France to throw down the barriers. The French are reluctant to act on the British pressure because they realize London's support is purely moral and that no military aid would be forthcoming in event of hostilities along the Pyrenees.

Duce Keeps Aloof.

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Premier Mussolini today gave no encouragement to efforts of France and Britain to make him promise to keep hands off Spain.

British and French officials actively sought a new plan to bring Italy to the conference table to discuss withdrawal of foreign volunteers from the Spanish civil war, but Il Duce remained aloof.

Authoritative circles in Rome indicated fear France would open her Spanish frontier to let supplies reach the Spanish government.

Rome also paid little heed to other suggestions for ameliorating the crisis, such as that emanating from Paris for an Anglo-French occupation of the Spanish Balearic Islands.

Court Clears U. S. Of Extra Cost for Memorial Bridge

A contracting firm that worked on the Arlington Memorial Bridge yesterday lost in the Supreme Court an attempt to make the Federal Government pay $4,259, which it said represented additional costs due to the presence of obstructions in the Potomac River mud.

The court refused to pass upon a decision against the contractors, Triest & Earle, Inc., by the Court of Claims.

The firm complained the Government failed to indicate the obstructions in its information for bidders.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Seven years of masquerading as a woman were ended here today for William Richeson, 26, who was sentenced to 90 days in the workhouse on a disorderly-conduct charge.

Richeson told court officials he had worked as a "waitress" in Catskill resort hotels and New York City restaurants and that he once had been a "matron" in an Albany hospital. Richeson was arrested as a woman and lodged in the women's house of detention for two days before his sex was discovered.

Hyperacidically-Induced
Stomach Ulcers Must Have Care

One of the chief factors in the continuance of ulcers in some people seems to be the irritating gastric contents which owe their irritating properties largely to their acidity. Therefore, the first step should be to reduce the acidity of the gastric secretion by diet and proper medicine which soothes and eases. The distinctively different Toma Tablets are an effective palliative and symptomatic aid for stomach ulcers and associated conditions induced by hyperacidity as they contain a unique combination of medical agents to soothe and ease. Their benefits have been proclaimed by thousands. Toma Tablets are available only through registered pharmacies in $1.25 and $3.00 bottles. Court Rejects Two Efforts to Remove Black glanced down the center aisle, picked up the printed text of the opinion and then cleared his throat.

Lawyers Differ on Whether Way Is Open for New Attacks.

"Ex parte Albert Levitt, an original proceeding," asserted the Chief Justice and as his audience in the silence of the huge chamber leaned forward in their seats, he commenced reading in his usual clear and brittle voice, as follows:

"The grounds of this motion are that the appointment of Mr. Justice Black by the President and the confirmation thereof by the Senate of the United States were null and void by reason of his ineligibility under Article I, Section 6, Clause 2, of the Constitution of the United States, and because there was no vacancy for which the appointment could lawfully be made."

Justice Black, as did other members of the court, sat immobile, staring straight ahead.

"The motion papers," continued the Chief Justice, "disclose no interest upon the part of the petitioner other than that of a citizen and a member of the bar of this court. That is insufficient. It is an established principle that to entitle a private individual to invoke the judicial power to determine the validity of executive or legislative action he must show that he has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining a direct injury as the result of that action and it is not sufficient that he has merely a general interest common to all members of the public."

Litigant May Object.

The Chief Justice then gave the citation of cases on which the court had based its decision: Tyler versus Judges, 179 U. S. 405; Southern Railway Co. versus King, 217 U. S. 524; Newman versus Frizzell, 238 U. S. 537; Fairchild versus Hughes, 258 U. S. 126 and Massachusetts versus Mellon, 262 U. S. 447.

"The motion is denied," the Chief Justice curtly concluded.

Announcing the Kelley motion, the Chief Justice disposed of that in a single sentence, "The motion is denied for the reasons stated in ex-parte Albert Levitt, decided this day."

Those who believed that the court had left its door ajar for further proceedings pointed out that the tribunal had ruled in effect that a similar suit might be successfully brought by anyone who could show that "he has sustained or is immediately in danger of sustaining a direct injury as the result" of the Black appointment.

Such a person, it might be argued, could be a litigant before the court. Someone with a case pending before the court might argue, it was said, that he was "immediately in danger of sustaining a direct injury" by reason of Justice Black's appointment. The use of that language was regarded by some as significant.

But a perusal of the cases cited by the court in deciding the Levitt motion showed that this language had been taken bodily from the tribunal's opinion in the cases of Massachusetts versus Mellon et al., decided in 1923.

Cases Are Analyzed.

Incidentally, in citing Fairchild versus Hughes, the court relied on a case in which Chief Justice Hughes was named as the defendant. It had to do with an effort to have the women's suffrage or nineteenth amendment set aside as void and was brought against the Secretary of State—who was then Hughes—and the Attorney General. In that decision it also was held that neither a State nor a private citizen could challenge an action of Congress unless direct interest or possible injury could be shown.

Those who believed that the court had written finis to the Black case as far as it was concerned pointed to the court's citation of Newman versus Frizzell. This was a case in which William J. Frizzell, a resident of the District of Columbia, challenged the appointment in 1913 of Oliver P. Newman, a newspaperman, as a commissioner of the District of Columbia by President Wilson.

Frizzell contended that Newman was not eligible under the requirement of three years residence in Washington to be a District Commissioner. Newman had come to Washington in 1910 but his newspaper duties frequently took him out of the city for periods. Thus Frizzell contended he did not enjoy three full years of residence here.

In that case the Supreme Court held Frizzell was not an "interested party," contending that a "general interest is not a private but a public interest." Thus the court held that such a "public interest" should be represented by the Attorney General or District attorney "who are expected by themselves or those they authorize to institute quo warranto proceedings against usurpers in the same way that they are expected to institute proceedings against any other violator of the law."

Levitt Quotes Job.

Thus it was argued that by citing that case in regard to the Levitt motion, the court in effect had held that only the Attorney General or the district attorney had the right to challenge Justice Black—and such action, it was held, would be unlikely.

One suggestion was that Levitt or someone else might seek a mandamus suit against the Attorney General or district attorney aimed at compelling them to do their duty. Still another avenue of approach suggested for a decision of the merits of the Black appointment was that the Comptroller General, whose duty is to see that no funds are unlawfully paid from the Treasury, might hold up Justice Black's salary.

In such an event the jurist would be compelled to sue for his salary in the Court of Claims and the latter body in all probability would certify the questions involved to the Supreme Court. But there was no indication that Justice Black's salary would be stopped. Indeed, it was reported he had already received several salary checks.

Levitt said he was considering several further steps but he declined to reveal them. He insisted his only formal comment would be found in the fifteenth verse of the thirteenth chapter of the Book of Job. This read:

"Though he slay me, yet will I trust him; but I will maintain mine own ways before him."

"There's nothing more I can do," asserted Kelley.

C. I. O. Leaders Predict Vote for Tokyo Boycott

Chinese Cites Lewis Pledge; Brophy Charges A. F. L. Plots Destruction.

Atlantic City, N. J., Oct. 11 (AP).—Leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization meeting here, toyed tonight with the question of adopting a resolution condemning Japan for its undeclared war on China. Some predicted privately the organization would suggest the United States boycott Japanese goods, following the lead of the American Federation of Labor.

Heng Chih Tao, member of the executive council of the All-China National Liberation Association, said John L. Lewis, chairman of the C. I. O., had promised him "there will be a resolution of some kind."

Lewis declined to predict what action the conference or its resolutions committee would take on the subject. Sidney Hillman, chairman of the textile industry organization drive and committee member, said, however, "We may do something about this Japanese boycott proposition."

4,000,000 Join C. I. O.

Harry Bridges, West Coast organizer of the National Maritime Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, said he was "hopeful" the Administration would "decree an economic boycott of Japan." He predicted his workers would support such a move, though it might reduce maritime employment 20 per cent. The 1936 and 1937 conventions of his union, he said, decided to support any such embargo President Roosevelt might order.

John Brophy, in a progress report, traced development of the C. I. O. from the time ten unions, headed by Lewis' United Mine Workers, bolted the A. F. L. to form an industrial union organization. Brophy said the C. I. O. has a membership of about 4,000,000 workers and the demand for organization "continues so strong that a membership of 4,000,000 is simply a passing marker in the steady progress of the C. I. O."

Tells of Organizing.

Asserting that almost 200 C. I. O. organizers are at work, Brophy estimated the strength of his largest unions as follows:

Steel, 510,000; automobiles, 400,000; rubber, 75,000; textiles, 270,00; mine workers, 600,000; transport industry, 80,000.

Brophy said 27 organizers had been sent to cannery and agricultural workers, "where organization was retarded by A. F. L. refusal to grant international industrial union charters."

Lewis, announcing appointment of a new committee to study the organization's finances, disclosed the C. I. O. had spent $1,743,968.96 for all purposes since June, 1936. About $960,000 of that total, he said, went to the Steel Workers Organizing Committee during the strikes it called at plants of a group of independent steel companies last summer. He explained that figure did not include expenditure of the S. W. O. C.'s own funds.

200 Postmasters To Convene Here

More than 200 delegates are expected to convene at the Willard Hotel this morning when the thirty-second annual convention of the National League of District Postmasters opens for a three-day session.

The organization is headed by John A. Moody, of Cotton Valley, La. Moody will give the annual report at the morning session.

Addresses of welcome will be offered by Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner of the District; J. Austin Latimer, speciay assistant to the Postmaster General, and Vincent C. Burke, Postmaster of the District of Columbia.

Mrs. 'Bertie Rushing, second vice president of the league, will speak on "The Equipment Problem" this afternoon.

Judge, Wed, Returns.

Judge Armond W. Scott, of the Municipal Court, who was married in Philadelphia last Thursday by Judge Edward W. Henry to Mrs. Annie Dismukes, a Treasury Department employe here, returned yesterday to the bench, following a trip to New Jersey and New York. He was the recipient of felicitations by members of the bench and bar throughout the day.

gamated Clothing Workers and the United Textile Workers to revolt against their own officers.

"We cannot fail to feel that the great rank and file of the United Mine Workers of America, who owe everything they have had, up to two years ago, to the American Federation of Labor . . . can give approval to the action of officers who levy upon them huge assessments for the serving of personal ends," the report said.

"We cannot believe that the membership of the United Textile Workers of America can approve the action which in their case is peculiarly startling and especially naked in its tempestuous disregard for rights and autonomous self-government.

"For, in this case, a treasury was confiscated, a constitution torn to shreds, officers driven to abdicate—a union demolished and made into a vassal province of the Prince Machiavelli who is its overlord."

John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department, recited charges that the organizing activities of the C. I. O. were closely linked with the Communist Party in America.

"A year ago the leader of the C. I. O. made more frequent visits to the White House than to the Russian Embassy in Washington," Frey said. "In recent months he has visited the Russian Embassy more frequently than the White House."

At the Soviet Embassy, Frey asserted, the C. I. O. leader was "wined, dined and had 'official' photographs" taken.

The photographs, he said, were "reproduced extensively in Russia" with comment that they were evidence of "friendly relations" between the Soviet and "the labor autocrat in the United States."

The resolutions committee especially assailed the C. I. O. for its political policies, particularly Lewis' demand last winter for Presidential help in the automobile strike.

Earlier the convention approved the federation's first invasion of C. I. O.-claimed territory the delegates approved a resolutions report approving charters for the Progressive Miners of America and the Blue Card Union of Ore Miners in the tri-State region of Missouri, Oklahoma and Kansas.

The Progressive Miners are a rival organization to Lewis' United Mine Workers in Illinois. The Blue Card Union occupied territory claimed by the Internatoinal Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, another C. I. O. affiliate.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE SOUTHEAST:

We are very anxious that you thoroughly understand the objectives of the Southeastern Governors' Conference, therefore, we ask you to read carefully the following:

Today American Industry is seeking locations where manufacturing and living conditions are most favorable. The Nine Southeastern States, blessed by a moderate climate, vast resources of raw materials, great supply of intelligent Anglo-Saxon labor, highly developed power supply, and excellent transportation facilities, offer ideal conditions to manufacturers in almost every line of industry.

Realizing these advantages, the Governors of these Nine Southeastern States have embarked upon a major cooperative program to let these facts be known to the Nation and to formulate their plans toward aiding and protecting the Industrial Development of our Southeast. Industry is being invited to this section with assurance that conditions will enable it to flourish and that the employees will be happy and contented.

This far-reaching movement has already created Nation-wide acclaim and tremendous response, as evidenced by numerous editorials and news headlines of the most important newspapers and magazines.

As Industrial Consultant to this Conference, I am sure that the people of this section will clearly understand our objectives and lend their cooperation to this broad undertaking. It means more employment, larger payrolls, and greater buying power, benefiting every man, woman and child - townspeople and farmers alike - throughout this entire Southeastern Section. The natural result will be a higher standard of living and a greater insurance against unemployment for our natural and ever-increasing population.

Sincerely yours,
Chip Robert

Strong Measures In Palestine.

Acting with determination and dispatch, the British authorities in Palestine have taken strong measures to preserve law and order in the Holy Land. Not only have very considerable military reinforcements been sent to certain trouble spots, notably Jerusalem, but also some of the outstanding leaders of the Arab Nationalist movement have been rounded up and spirited out of the land.

The immediate occasion for this British show of force was undoubtedly the wanton murder some weeks ago by unknown Arab assassins of the British political agent for the Galilee district. But even had that event not taken place it is probable that strong action by the Palestine government against the terrorists would have been ordered.

In the past, the British may have taken a somewhat complacent view regarding isolated acts of violence in the Holy Land. Perhaps they felt that the fires of Nationalist passions would sooner or later burn themselves out. But now that they have decided to cut the Gordian knot of Arab-Jewish rivalry by partitioning Palestine they are in no mood to tolerate any interference with their plans.

Since the measures cited were taken lawlessness in the Holy Land has almost disappeared. The threat of another Arab general strike has come to nothing. And even if such a move should be ordered it is doubtful whether it would make much headway. The last general strike was a failure and, finally, had to be called off after inflicting untold injury upon both Arab and Jewish business interests. This time Great Britain has made it clear that no extreme measures will be tolerated.

The present British stand is praiseworthy. But it is a pity that it took London so long to realize the need for determined action against lawless elements in Palestine. Indeed, it is arguable that a stronger stand in the past would not only have saved many lives but also would have made it unnecessary to carry out the desperate remedy of a tripartite partition which Great Britain is now determined to see through as a last resort.

Labor Coercing Labor.

The Wagner act has been sharply criticized for its one-sided emphasis upon the protection of employes against unfair employer practices. While the employer is forbidden to interfere with or in any way coerce workers in the exercise of their rights to organize and bargain collectively, through representatives of their own choosing, he is not given any protection in return against unfair or oppressive union practices. If employes commit illegal acts, of course, the employer may seek redress. But there are no rules of conduct imposed upon the unions comparable to those applicable to employers.

The unilateral nature of the Wagner act has brought many demands for its revision from representatives of employers. It is more novel to have employe organizations urging changes in the law to protect them against the coercion of their fellow workers. However, the National Society of Professional Engineers has adopted a resolution in favor of amending the law so that members of legally recognized learned professions shall be exempt from any requirement to be represented by a nonprofessional collective bargaining agency.

It is charged that many engineers have been forced to join C. I. O. unions or risk losing their jobs. The resolution is apparently designed to protect members against that sort of pressure. There may be some element of class feeling in this stand, but the professional status of the group raises special problems that have to be taken into account. Many of the engineers rightly believe their position entails heavy responsibility to the communities employing them and precludes strikes or resort to the ordinary weapons of industrial war. One solution for the plight of such professional groups appears to lie in strengthening their own organization.

The situation is much more difficult to handle when coercion is exercised by one group of workers against another group of the same or comparable status. It is hard to see how an amendment to the Wagner act, for instance, could prevent organizers for the C. I. O. from luring members away from rival organizations by means that might be unfair without being illegal.

Moreover, the act itself being based on recognition of the majority principle of representation, puts great pressure upon employe minorities to join any organization that has over 50 per cent of the workers' votes. If they remain aloof they are in the position of people who have no voice in the determination of the conditions of their own employment. The perplexing questions of this sort can never be satisfactorily handled by amending the law. For the most part they can be dealt with more effectively by giving larger powers to the administrative agencies that enforce the law.

Ogden L. Mills.

The untimely death of Ogden L. Mills will create a keen sense of loss in many circles. Mr. Mills had won a distinguished place for himself as a public servant, as a business man and as a leader in the Republican Party. Coming at a time when he was still in the prime of life, his death deprives the country of an able executive, a thoughtful critic and an energetic exponent of the American economic and political systems.

Although a wealthy man, Mr. Mills did not choose the easy way of life. He was not particularly distinguished for hard work in his younger days. But when increasing responsibility put him to the test he demonstrated not only energy and devotion but also a keen aptitude for administrative work.

Reverses at the polls did not dissuade him from following a public career, even though it would have been easy for him to have quit at any time. His knowledge of the tax problems and Government finance and his experience in the Treasury Department made him the logical successor to Secretary Andrew Mellon when the latter retired in February, 1932. Mr. Mills took over this key position in one of the most difficult periods in the financial and economic history of the United States. Despite the baffling nature of his task and the general gloom of that period, Mr. Mills left a fine record of constructive service.

It is in another field, however, that Mr. Mills' career may prove to be most significant. He became one of this country's leading exponents of the capitalistic and democratic systems. The former Treasury head has often been described as an uncompromising foe of the New Deal. But in some respects that designation is misleading. He vigorously challenged various methods used by the Roosevelt Administration, but he also approved many of its objectives.

In the opinion held by Mr. Mills democracy and the competitive industrial system go hand in hand. His greatest fear was that the current drift toward authoritarian rule in many parts of the world may crush free enterprise as well as popular government. "Everywhere," he complained, "democracy is on the defensive. Everywhere free enterprise is in chains." He was convinced that the American people have reached a point where they must face that issue and fight it out within the limits of the constitutional system.

Mr. Mills' lucid defense of the capitalistic system was based on his belief that it draws unparalleled strength from the energies of countless individuals; that competitive processes compel growth and progress; that the constant striving for more efficient production leads to more extensive output and consequently to lower costs and prices. In this way, he contended, more goods are made available to the people and the standard of living is consequently raised.

In spite of this vigorous championship of capitalism, Mr. Mills was by no means an advocate of "laissez faire." He clearly recognized the necessity of eliminating abuses and weaknesses in our social and economic life. "The crying need today," he wrote in his recent book "Liberalism Fights On," "is for statesmanship capable of defining the boundaries within which government regulation may be accepted as salutary, and the wide field within which it is essential to maintain the principles of economic individualism and of free enterprise if our scheme of life is to endure."

If the present trend toward governmental domination of economic activity continues, the significance of the views expounded by Mr. Mills will be greatly enhanced. For his aim was to keep our social and economic evolution within the limits of the democratic system. His death deprives that cause of a most intelligent and courageous leader. As the country struggles to solve these problems, it will doubtless accord Mr. Mills well-merited recognition for his counsel as well as for his efficient administration in high public office.

A Justifiable Complaint.

The protest of the National Civil Service Reform League against the tremendous increase of political appointees in the Bureau of Internal Revenue ought to resound throughout the country. No part of our Governmental machinery ought to be more rigorously safeguarded against the spoilsmen than the tax collecting system. Yet it appears to have been turned over to the political job hunters.

No good reason has ever been found for the exemption of deputy collectors of the Bureau of Internal Revenue from the requirements of the civil service system. That long-standing blunder has kept the bureau under a constant handicap. Now, however, the Civil Service Reform League fears that an exorbitant number of "deputy collectors" are being appointed to serve in other positions merely to evade civil service regulations.

Whether or not these suspicions are justified, it is about time for the Administration to put an end to the destructive influence of the spoils system upon its tax gathering agency. The influence of politicians in making appointments to positions where impartiality and competence are of the greatest importance affords a severe test for the Administration's policy of extending the merit system upward, downward and outward. It is time to give the country a concrete demonstration of the advantages of merit in Government service instead of merely talking about it.

The Popular Front Wins.

As a rule, cantonal elections in France have about as remote a relationship to prevailing political trends in that republic as municipal and county elections have in ours. Though fought by individuals who bear national party labels the dominant issues in such elections tend to be local rather than national.

This year, however, French cantonal elections were endowed by interested groups with a significance out of all proportion to their intrinsic importance. Having become convinced that the people of France have lost much of their enthusiasm for the Popular Front during the past year, the Right parties agreed to consolidate their forces for a united assault on Radical Socialists, Socialists and Communists, the three major parties that back the present government. By capturing the majority of places in the 90 departmental councils, the Right hoped to deal the Popular Front coalition a decisive blow.

The strategy had, theoretically, much to recommend it. As a general rule, the Right makes a better showing in local elections than in elections for the Chamber of Deputies. In the 1931 cantonal fights, for instance, the Communists who have since become the third party in the Chamber secured only about a dozen of the 1,500 seats in the departmental councils.

Yet the strategy of the Right was so transparent that the Left forces, for all the differences between them, decided to muster their full strength to meet the onslaught. Not only were they eager to prove that the Popular Front continues to command the support of the French people, but there was the additional incentive that only by capturing the departmental councils could they bring about any modification in the present balance of power in the Senate. That body is not elected directly by the people but indirectly by electors chosen in part by the departmental councils.

Thus the issue was joined. But the results were, in advance, sufficiently in doubt to cause both Premier Chautemps and, later, the cabinet as a whole to issue statements declaring that they would not consider the results of the cantonal balloting as having any bearing on their own tenure in office.

As it happened, these statements were unnecessary. The candidates of Popular Front parties secured about the same proportion of the vote in the local elections as the three parties had polled in last year's balloting for the chamber. If anything, the results of next week's run-off poll should add to their strength.

Thus the maneuver of the Right bids fair to be a boomerang. For now as in 1936 the nation at large has manifested its faith in the Popular Front.

What Every Woman Knows.

Preparing food for the gods would seem an elementary culinary task compared to dishing up a dinner for Oscar of the Waldorf. In the kitchens of Olympus one could always fall back on nectar and ambrosia as sure-fire favorites. But it cannot be easy to concoct a delicacy to titillate the fancy of one who has been a famous chef for four decades. Yet that is the problem which confronted those who made up the menu for Oscar Tschirky's golding wedding anniversary last week at the Waldorf Astoria.

Oscar was never a "madman to stir up all" without a thought to ingredients. His salads were works of art, and one, the Waldorf, has been the answer to many a hostess' prayer. Perhaps that's why salads were conspicuous by their absence at this mixing maestro's testimonial dinner. To set before him one which did not have the classic dash of this and that would be like playing chopsticks for Stokowski. However, all of Oscar's other succulent favorites were there.

Oscar's national reputation and his decorations from three governments more than attest his culinary skill. But even if he did not know the difference between a Parker House roll and a lady finger, he would still be entitled to a medal of some sort. Because in all the 50 years of their married life, according to his wife, he "has never made a kitchen suggestion." For this alone he should be awarded the Highest Honor of the Harassed Housewife.

"A church at Haines City, Fla., is using rocking chairs instead of pews, to seat the worshipers in comfort."—Newspaper filler. We don't believe churchgoers should be pampered any such way. If they can't sleep in pews, let 'em stay at home.

"Salt Lake City teachers will no longer be allowed to accept apples from their pupils," according to a press dispatch. To a poorly paid and hungry teacher, an apple can constitute an enormous temptation.

Some are objecting to the appreciably shorter skirts as dictated by Dame Fashion for fall wear, but as far as we can see they are all right.

Then there's the girl, playing golf with her boy friend, who can't keep her mind on the game. She's always knocking her ball into the woods.

The less of anything a man has the prouder of it he is. This is especially true in the case of brains.

Fires And Smoking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During fire-prevention week due consideration should be given the various causes of fires, the proportionate losses from each cause, and the best means of eliminating all preventable fires.

Of 21 main causes of fires, according to fire insurance statistics, tobacco smoking heads the list. It is estimated that about 40 per cent of all losses of life and property through fires can be attributed to this preventable evil. Yet this plain fact is ignored to a large extent during fire-prevention week by the press and many of the public-spirited citizens who comment on this vitally important subject.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters states that tobacco smoking is the direct cause of fires which cost $165,000 per week, or about $8,583,375 per year.

Another authority states that over 50 per cent of all forest and brush fires are caused by smoking, especially cigarettes, which includes burning matches tossed away by smokers. It has been conservatively estimated that at least half of all fires in Government departments in the District of Columbia during the last ten years have been caused by smokers.

In considering plans for eliminating this greatest source of all fires, education against the use of tobacco, especially in the public schools, is fundamentally and always the best method.

Most Americans are still non-smokers despite false claims to the contrary being broadcast by all kinds of cigarette advertising, and when this clean and sane majority decide to assert their rights to freedom from tobacco-started fires and the constant annoyance of being forced to breathe tobacco-poisoned air, a movement will be launched from which there can be no escape for this, the greatest of all, fire hazards.

War And Profits.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Being employed in a local institution where I can see and come in pretty close contact with the shattered remnants of what were men 22 years ago, an article which received little notice on the fourth page of your paper for September 30 interested me much more than several articles that have been receiving glaring headlines.

I refer to the fact that British insurance companies are refusing to write war risk insurance policies. Such an action should be more effective in reducing threat of war than any of the so-called peace movements of the past 20 years. Movements based on idealism never can succeed.

Wars, either declared or undeclared, are based on greed, and dictated, not by the poor fools who must either die suddenly on the field of battle, or miserably at home after years of broken health, poverty and often insanity. But they are declared by men whose "foreign investments" must be protected at the cost of the lives of the poor fools whom they rob and exploit, under the guise of union fees, taxation, etc., during peace time, and whose families are equally robbed and exploited under the guise of "war necessity" in war time.

Hit them where it hurts, and we will have less need for institutions which give them a chance to pose. Idealism never stopped anything that offered profit. Practical action will. When people stop waving flags and start cutting off revenues to firms that need armies and navies to protect their "foreign investments," then we will have room in our papers for news other than tales of bombings of "neutral shipping" by nations "not at war," or the sinking of fishing fleets by "unidentified submarines."

Greenbelt.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your recent editorial "Santa Claus at Greenbelt" and the two letters which it evoked seem to me to include flagrant errors of fact or reasoning.

The 885 homes at Greenbelt did not cost $16,302 each as "outraged" asserted in his letter. According to your own news columns they cost $5,423 each, while the rest of the money invested in the community went into streets, public buildings, utility installations, a sewage disposal plant, a lake and playgrounds.

The facilities moreover were designed to allow a fourfold expansion in the town without additional investment for such purposes.

Greenbelt residents will not be "tax free" as some letters in The Post have asserted. Your own news articles have stated that the rentals will include the normal State and local taxes.

You have totally ignored the chief value of Greenbelt—the lesson in town planning and community organization which it will furnish to millions of Americans for generations to come. Sir Raymond Unwin, the greatest of all town planners, has praised Greenbelt as being at least 20 years ahead of any similar development anywhere in the world.

It might be well to add that I am not eligible to live at Greenbelt and do not work for the Government.

World Animal Day.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was my privilege to be present at the celebration of World Animal Day on October 4, and it was indeed gratifying to note the large attendance and enthusiastic interest manifested in animal protection. I also attended the memorial services for deceased pets held at Aspen Hill Animal Cemetery, near Norbeck, Md., which services were most impressive.

I wish to go on record as an animal lover. I certainly love the dumb creatures who are so faithful and true—our silent companions.

For centuries a close companionship has existed between man and his dog, and this relationship has existed by the wish of man and on the merit of the dog.

Children should be taught to be kind to animals and that it is cowardly to hurt a creature that is weaker than they are. All good children love animals.

I also wish to express myself as in favor of the new bill we hear so much about, recently introduced in Congress, to provide protection to animals, and hope it will soon become a law.

Loans To Tenant Farmers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Of all the asinine and unconstitutional measures ever brought to the attention of the writer was the announcement over the radio last Saturday night that nearly $10,000,000 was now available for loans from the Federal Government to tenants and sharecroppers to buy farms.

But if we concede the Government has the authority to lend the money for such a purpose, is it practicable? In the first place, the tenants and sharecroppers would not be such if they had the business ability and the intelligence to operate successfully a farm on their own initiative and responsibility. Secondly, will the landlords sell their farms to their tenants and sharecroppers? And thirdly, buying a farm is only the first step. The farm has to be equipped for operation, which will cost more than the land.

In the section from which the writer hails, the tenants and sharecroppers are far better off than the landlords. The writer has just spent a week in his native section on a large plantation. The tenants and sharecroppers with their families total about 30 people. They are all comfortably housed, rent free, and apparently are happy and contented. Most of them have automobiles, radios, one or more mules, cows, pigs, chickens, etc. They pay no taxes, and are furnished firewood and pasturage free.

The landlord gets only one-fourth of the crop, and often has to stake the tenant for fertilizer until the crops are marketed. The tenant has no responsibility other than to plant, harvest and market his crop. Should these people fall for this proposition and buy farms their happy lot will be destroyed, and it will be but a short time before the Government will own the farms and the tenants will be back just where they started.

The only possible conclusion is that this is nothing but a scheme to buy votes and win supporters for the New Deal.

ANTI-NEW DEAL.
Washington, Oct. 9.

Spending And Votes.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An article in your paper quotes Senator Copeland as saying that the New Dealers will probably win again in 1940, but you did not emphasize the principal reason given by the Senator for his prediction.

In some other papers the Senator is quoted as saying that the New Deal will win if it continues to dip into the Treasury for campaign funds, nominally disguised as relief appropriations, farm subsidies, etc.

I think most any intelligent political observer who is unprejudiced will admit that if the New Dealers had not dipped into the Treasury for several billions of dollars just preceding the last election, Roosevelt would have been overwhelmingly defeated. And I agree with Senator Copeland that if they pull the same trick again in 1940 they can elect Roosevelt, Lewis, or almost anyone else they choose to run. But by that time, at the pace they are going now, "the cupboard may be bare."

On Curbing Cotton.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial today on "The Problem of Cotton" is very good so far as it goes, but let's have a solution to overproduction. Here it is.

Prohibit the manufacture, sale or use of commercial fertilizers for an indefinite period, until the increased acreage and increased labor necessary to produce enough to catch up with consumption warrants its use again. Then only on a percentage to acre requirements as to crops.

Pay the fertilizer manufacturers 6 per cent net on their investments as long as they are shut down.

Without the use of commercial fertilizers acreage plowed and planted would increase at least 25 per cent and additional labor required would be 10 to 20 per cent more. Cost of production would be more and naturally the selling prices always would be higher.

This beats "pegging a price" or subsidizing.

The Post Impressionist

Those Last Moments.

It was just as I always had imagined it would be.

There were the flowers, banked in beauty at the altar, adding their color to the solemn scene. There were the relatives and friends, sad-eyed, solemn, some openly brushing tears from their eyes. There was the throb of soft organ music, accenting rather than breaking the awesome hush of the gathering.

I wondered why I couldn't smell the flowers, something I had always loved—that heavy, all-pervading perfume, adding the proper funereal touch, filling the room to bursting with a brave fragrance, all the sweeter because the flowers, too, were past their prime and in a few short hours would be browned and withered and dead.

From my position I could see the minister quite plainly, his gown so properly arranged, his glasses balanced on the precarious bridge of his nose at just the proper ecclesiastical angle. There was something reassuring about him, as he stood there, although all the personality had gone out of him and he was now but the symbol of his calling. You knew that anything he did, from noonday grace to dedicating a cathedral, would be done just right: none of the words misplaced, none of the accepted gestures omitted.

Could that be a small and sinful bead of perspiration on his white and clerical brow? I wondered if it were hot in the church. My own feelings were the same as they had been for the past few days—a sort of numbness all over, beyond warmth or cold.

But I was uncomfortable in these strange, neatly-pressed clothes, with the stiff, starched collar and the conservative dark tie. It had been a task to drape these respectable habiliments about my unwieldly frame, more used to tweeds and comfortable slacks.

Suddenly someone coughed in one of the front pews, where the single shaft of sunlight showed the dancing dust. It was a burst of sound, not to be controlled by any subterfuge of handkerchief and palm, a noise that made people stare and seemed to disturb even the saint in the stained glass window—the one whose eye had been fixed upon me. Another cough—and the quiet of the gathering was shattered, as when a big perch broke the surface of Mirror Lake and fell splashing back amid the ripples.

Mirror Lake! What good times came rushing to mind: long and languid afternoons when a boy and his father dropped lazy lines from the shore, hoping the bites would be few, so they could skip out of their clothes and drop into the cooling waters.

But Mirror Lake was far away in the past, in days that could never be lived again—or could they?

Suddenly I was impatient. Why couldn't they get on with this service? Why didn't the reverend sir open the prayer book to the page his index finger so carefully marked? Why couldn't they get it over with and be done with me?

I wondered what would happen if I suddenly tore off the stiff collar that was giving me a neck-ache, if I tossed it in the middle of that too-large cluster of roses, and with a shout, started a run down the aisle.

There would be consternation, of course. I could imagine the horrified looks on those solemn faces, the wide-eyed distress of my friend the minister. Everyone would be upset—and after all I could hardly blame them. But who would ever dream you had feelings like these?

No, it was up to me to keep still. To listen to the droning service, to leave undisturbed these careful preparations. But I did wish people would stop staring at me—after all, I wasn't any different than the last time they had seen me. At least, I didn't think I was. If they would only start . . .

All at once I realized the organ was playing louder than before. I heard a murmur starting at the back and sweeping over the whole auditorium. Now I didn't have to wait any longer, thank goodness!

"Here comes the bride", they said.

Humorists Abroad.

The recent award by the Mark Twain Society of its gold medal to Mr. P. G. Wodehouse is an event that has been welcomed equally on both sides of the Atlantic. An eminent English author once remarked that Mr. Wodehouse had invented a new language, and in one way, this is very true; but it is no local dialect. For the inimitable Jeeves, and the countless other members of that quaint, eccentric and hilariously comic company that wear Mr. Wodehouse's motley, are troupers who can "put over" their performance in any community that speaks the English tongue, and in quite a few that cannot.

This is another point against the belief, so often expressed, that a fundamental difference separates American humor from English—whereas the difference is surely one of manner rather than essence, of technique rather than material. There is nothing that has prevented the celebrated humorists of either country from being, almost invariably, appreciated in both; one need only instance Dickens, Mark Twain and O. Henry.

Humor is, in fact, a "lingua franca," of which the "new language" of Mr. Wodehouse is but a variant; and it does much, in the hands of a master like himself, to spread understanding and toleration of one another among the nations.

Public Buildings.

ANYONE HAVING OCCASIONAL business in public buildings in this country is certain to be impressed by the soiled and frowsy state of these temples of government which are pretty much alike everywhere outside Washington. In the National Capital, it must be admitted, they do things much better, and even such gruesome old heaps as the Treasury and the State Department are kept in reasonably tidy condition. But our city halls and county courthouses and the public office buildings in our State capitals as well as postoffices and Federal courthouses are of a depressing sameness as to dirt, dust, tobacco stains and smell. Just as jails, poorhouses and asylums have a distinctive odor, as of misery and disinfectant, these others possess an atmosphere more readily sensed by the spirit than the nose which conveys the thought of contempt for government and for the people under it.

• • • •

THE CHICAGO CITY HALL and County Building and the New York Municipal Building are alike in this respect, and the new Palace of Justice hard by the Tombs, though dedicated it seems but yesterday, already has acquired its layer of grime inside and out. It seems that holders of public office and those having regular business in such structures have somewhat the same feeling about them that little boys have about new football pants. Little boys believe that new football pants should be smeared with mud and grass stains without delay, and a new public building remains new no longer than it takes the occupants and regular frequenters to foul it with the traditional marks of untidiness. That is almost no time at all.

A building owned by private capital, though handling much greater traffic, may be kept in good order for many years, and with no greater and probably much smaller staff. But turn over a courthouse or city hall to a lot of judges and other politicians, and inside two years it will have deteriorated to the level of all the other buildings of like character. There will be tobacco juice on the tiles and around the feet of the columns, cigarette butts flattened and frayed in all the corridors and greasy dust in the elevator cages and on the walls of the shafts. Doors will be blocked off, makeshift partitions erected and furniture stowed in the halls. And over all there will be an air of frowsiness difficult to describe but easily perceived and recognized as typical, for it is not to be found in any other buildings. It is the spirit of the public service, the feeling that because the place belongs to the public nobody has any obligation to respect it.

THE ARCHITECTURE HAS changed much, and now runs pretty much to the box-car simplicity, which is supposed to combine efficiency with charm. Older ideas always called for a billowy female stripped to the waist, holding a shock of wheat in one hand and a sickle in the other and a big, muscular guy holding a sledge hammer and a geared wheel carved out of Indiana limestone by some leading head-stone cutter. But these figures, set above the door, always became pigeon roosts and, with artistic progress, we decided to put the money into retiring rooms for the judges and big bronze doors. But the difference is only superficial, and you may enter a new edifice or an old one wearing a blindfold and detect no difference, although you will be instantly aware that you are in a public building.

This is not to be construed as a complaint, but merely as an observation on one phase of the American scene which the artists failed to capture when they were daubing for Mr. Ickes not so long ago. But it won't be necessary for him to send anyone back to catch it because, though the scene and the times may change, this squalor is something permanent. It will always be here as long as we have public buildings, for it is 100 per cent American.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Wall Street And Old Sol.

The behavior of the stock market is influenced by spots on the sun, says Dr. Harlan True Stetson, professor of cosmo-terrestrial relations at Massachusetts Tech. Prices on the stock exchange have paralleled these solar disturbances for years, the professor declares.

• • • •

The more sun spots the more stock declines. And the more stock declines the more sun spots. It seems the SEC hasn't got around to fixing this up yet.

• • • •

The past week was a week of unprecedented solar disturbances, says Dr Stetson, and if you had consulted the sun instead of your broker you wouldn't have lost money.

• • • •

Now is the time for all good operators to decide wether they are playing the market or studying astronomy.

• • • •

We understand the directors of a big corporation passed their dividend last week. Business was never better with it, but the directors are not quite satisfied with the showing of the sun for the second half of the fiscal year.

• • • •

And this morning's batch of market letters included the following:

Shafer, Blitz & Himmell: While we think the sun a little spottier than usual, we are not inclined to look for a further break in prices. There was, it is true, quite a forward movement during which few investors paid any attention to sun spots, but on the other hand, we cannot overlook the fact that many stocks went off from 5 to 15 points recently and at a time when the sun looked rougher than a carpetlayer's thumb. We favor no further commitments until this sun stuff is straightened out.

Horntwiggle & Snubbins: We regard the excellent behavior of the sun yesterday, when the stock market was stumbling all over the lot, as significant. We would not be caught short of industrials, rails or smoked glasses.

Bozzle, Beezle & Buzzell: As we predicted in our Tuesday morning letter, the sun got spotty again with the natural lowering of market morale. We think the reaction has gone too far, however, and in proof of this we cite the case of a big investor who unloaded stocks yesterday, declaring he had seen spots on the sun. Later he discovered it was all due to soup stains on his spectacles.

Hammonnassett & Beachcomber Sons: With the sun full of spots, and the stock market full of spots, we do not feel any too good ourselves. The fact that stocks have stood still for the past four hours is due, we believe, to the fact that the weather is so cloudy even the smartest operators have been unable to get a peek at celestial conditions. We advise postponing any commitments until the first clear day.

Pinochle, Pinochle & Perlbloom: Our Washington correspondent advises us that the SEC is more perplexed than usual, but favors some control of the solar system. We hear the commission may ask sunspot observers to put up 80 per cent margin. The whole financial situation is complicated by a report that there are spots on Dr. Stetson.

What Of Columbus?

Enigmas Concerning Ancestry, Birthplace, Early Life And Much Else Relating To America's Discoverer Unresolved After Four Centuries.

By A. Curtis Wilgus.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

TODAY throughout the Western Hemisphere and in widely scattered parts of the world people and organizations are commemorating the discovery made by an intrepid navigator 445 years ago. But, though his name is on so many lips, he is still virtually an unknown man. Perhaps more legends and myths have grown up around his name than around that of any other historical character. Certainly less is known about Columbus than about most of the other great figures of history.

Who was he? Where and when was he born? What was his early life? What did he look like? Was he educated or illiterate? Was he better or worse than the men of his time? When, where, and how did he die? Where is he buried? These and many other questions cannot be answered by historians of today with any degree of certainty.

Only a few weeks ago a small book with a big title was published called "Christopher Columbus Was a Greek and His Real Name Was Nikolaos Ypsilantis from the Greek island of Chios." But the arguments offered by its author, Spyros Cateras, are even less supported by proof than are those of other books which attempt to discuss the origin of Columbus.

Some serious scholars would have us believe that Cristobal Colon, as he is known in Spanish, was really a navigator named Christopherus Sanchez Enriquez, while others say that his name was Portuguese in origin being Salvador Goncales Zarco. Still others give him Jewish and non-Christian names. Probably for all time we shall be uncertain on this point.

When and where was he born? The finding of the answers to this question will make any man's name immortal. There are 15 cities in Italy where the traveler today can see the "birthplace" of Columbus. And outside of Italy there are a dozen places in Spain, Portugal, and France where the tourist will also be shown his ancestral home. Certainly someone will again "discover" another birthplace, for realtors and tourist bureaus are ever interested in the problem.

Date Of Birth Never Finally Established.

THE DATE of Columbus' birth, according to the best authorities, cannot be fixed, but he probably saw the light of day between 1446 and 1451. Unfortunately no birth certificate exists, or is likely to be found, so that this question cannot be settled to the satisfaction of all.

We know practically nothing about the early life of the discoverer. It has never been proved that Columbus attended a university, or that he ran away to sea, or that his father was a woolcomber. It is not known whether Columbus traveled widely before the year of his great discovery. The pages of his early life are crowded with legend, myth and fiction, all of which make interesting reading but poor history.

There are at least 41 different portraits of Columbus, no two of which seem to depict the same individual and none of which seems to have been painted during his lifetime. These pictures show many varied characteristics and range from a French-appearing dandy to a half-witted looking man with a basket of eggs on his arm staring foolishly at an egg held up before him.

No doubt this portrait aims to perpetuate the story of Columbus and the egg, known to all school children, which is probably apocryphal. Even the friends of Columbus differed in describing his appearance. Some said that he had red hair, others that it was white; some said that he was of middle stature, others that he was above medium height; and some said that he had a white complexion, while others that he was of ruddy countenance.

A great English authority on Columbus, Cecil Jane, believed that the discoverer may very probably have been illiterate when he sailed westward. He also sees proof that the admiral was a poor navigator and only reached America because the other two ships of his small fleet were in charge of the Pinzon brothers, both excellent navigators. Certainly Columbus was a poor sailor for he was seasick much of the time. Mr. Jane also believed that Columbus was a poor colonial administrator and that he always caused dissension among his followers. Withal, this authority believed that the discoverer was a religious fanatic who sailed westward with the fixed idea that he had been appointed by God to convert the heathens to Christianity.

Columbus Has Had Both Detractors And Defenders.

THE CHARACTER of Columbus has been criticized by many investigators, for he was no better and no worse than the men of his day. Some writers have called him an "insipid dreamer," a "liar and a braggart," a "seducer," an "ambitious and unscrupulous adventurer," and many other similar expressions. On the other hand Columbus has had many more defenders than detractors.

The best known facts of the admiral's life are concerned with his discoveries, yet to this day his first landing place in the West Indies remains unknown, and no amount of dilligent research seems likely to solve this problem.

After the return from his fourth voyage Columbus seems to have been ill physically and mentally, it being now believed that he suffered from a brain disorder due to syphilis. Probably he passed away on May 20, 1506, at Valladolid, Spain, but his death appears not to have been noted in the records of that city until 2" years later when people read "The admiral is dead."

The exact location of his body at that time is uncertain, although it may have been resting in a vault of the Carthusian Monastery of Santa Maria de las Cuervas in Seville. From there the Spanish government on three different occasions ordered the body removed to the island of Espanola, as Santo Domingo was then called. But the transfer does not appear to have taken place until 1451.

Was Wrong Body Taken From Santo Domingo Chapel?

IN THE ISLAND the remains, if indeed they were those of Columbus, were interred in the Columbus Chapel. One hundred and thirty-five years later the cathedral records showed that the bones of the navigator lay on the right side of the altar, while on the left side lay the remains of his brother Bartolome.

Another 120 years passed when, in 1796, the island was ceded to France and the body of the discoverer was removed to the cathedral at Havana, Cuba, where a fitting monument was erected bearing the inscription:

"O, rest thou, image of great Colon
Thousand centuries remain guarded in the urn
And in the remembrance of our nation."

Eighty-one years now passed until 1877. When repairs were being made in the cathedral at Santo Domingo, the workers found an empty vault and near it another containing a lead coffin with an inscription which seemed to indicate that it contained the body of the Admiral. Thereupon the bishop decided that the wrong body had been taken to Havana and that the body remaining behind was that of Columbus.

This opinion was reversed by the Academy of History at Madrid after an investigation in which it showed that the remains at Santo Domingo were those of one of the Admiral's grandsons and that the inscription on the casket had been added to or altered.

Finally, in 1898, during the war between Spain and the United States, the Spanish government transferred the body from the cathedral at Havana to the cathedral at Seville, Spain. And if this history is not complicated enough to confuse the searcher for the tomb of Columbus, it may be added that every now and then a new burial place of the discoverer is found in Spain.

How obscure and beclouded are the lives of some great men. Let us at least hope that no one tries to prove that Columbus was an American!

Case Of Jitters

On Jumping To Conclusions

THE STORM of controversy which has been raging in this country over America's role in world affairs ever since President Roosevelt made his great speech at Chicago has very largely been confined to the conclusions he reached from his analysis of the present international situation. There has been relatively little dispute over that analysis itself.

Isolationists and co-operationists alike are agreed that, as the President pointed out, "the political situation in the world . . . is such as to cause grave anxiety to all peoples and nations who wish to live in peace and amity with their neighbors."

They are equally agreed that the mood of high hope that obtained a few years ago has "of late given way to a haunting fear of calamity," that the world is faced by a "reign of terror and international lawlessness." And there are very few Americans who will not agree with Mr. Roosevelt in his eloquent denunciation of international barbarism as manifested in recent days.

Where isolationists and those who believe that isolation is an impossibility in the modern world part company is, first of all, over the question whether the situation described by the President concerns us and, secondly, if it does, whether we can or should do anything about it.

• • • •

THERE ARE SOME who insist that our interest in world affairs must be purely intellectual; that we should view the struggle, say in the Far East, with the same impersonal calm that an entomologist is capable of viewing a struggle between red ants and black.

But mankind, being what it is, rejects so preposterous a plea for Olympian aloofness. Where principles are involved human beings are certain to take sides and there is no reason why they shouldn't. Nor is the thesis correct that such judgments are invariably faulty since they must perforce be based on inadequate evidence.

It is true, of course, that historians are still debating the question of World War guilt; that some of the judgments which men formed during the turbulent years between 1914 and 1918 were faulty. But this does not mean that there can be the same doubt over guilt or innocence regarding all international crises.

Can any one with any knowledge of what was going on in 1935 and 1936 believe that it was not Mussolini but Haile Selassie who was the aggressor in the Italo-Ethiopian struggle of those years? To be sure, Fascist propagandists, paid and unpaid, labored that very point. But no one who has read the frank admissions of Gen. de Bono can now entertain any such belief.

In condemning Italy as an aggressor, the members of the League of Nations were thus passing a contemporary judgment which is certain also to be the judgment of posterity. And equally, only the special pleaders can argue that in the present conflict in the Far East it is not Japan but China which is the aggressor.

• • • •

THE QUESTION then arises: Does the question of aggression concern us? Does it make any particular difference to us if the reign of international lawlessness continues spreading from one part of the world to the other?

There are some who answer such a question in the negative. It is too bad, they say, that China is being attacked by Japan; that Italy and Germany have intervened in Spain; that Ethiopia was overrun by Italy; that the aggressors are everywhere on the march. But these developments are remote from our interests.

The presumption is that we can ignore the unpleasant world about us. Yet our own actions betray our inner fears that this is not the case at all. The very circumstance that Congress, succumbing to an attack of unrealism, has since 1935 passed a succession of neutrality laws shows that we have been fearful that the fires raging elsewhere may engulf us too. And by the same token, if contradictorily, our expenditures for defense purposes has steadily gone up during these last years of international tension. These appropriations are certain to increase rather than diminish as the chaos spreads.

BUT THE ISOLATIONISTS, even when they admit all this, insist at the same time that there is nothing which the United States can do, other than pass neutrality laws and pile up its armaments, to help bring order in the world. Every such co-operative action we may take, they insist, constitutes, perforce, a step on the road to war.

This is turning facts on their head. The real road to war if the events of the past six years are any indication, is the road we and the other peace-loving nations have taken or, rather, upon which we have progressively been forced to travel. It was not action on our part but rather inaction that has helped bring the world to its present sorry and dangerous pass. If inaction and indifference could have made us secure we should today, after 18 years of failure to do all we could have done for world peace, feel completely secure.

We now feel anything but secure. Is it not time, therefore, to reverse the process, to throw dangerous indifference and inaction overboard and seek, together with other peace-loving states to save the situation while it can still be saved?

• • • •

AH, say the isolationists, that means waging war. For how else can the aggressor be restrained. But this is jumping to rash conclusions. The peace-loving nations possess such a plenitude of economic and financial power that they can do much by cooperating with one agother to hold aggressors in check or at least deprive them of the fruits of their aggressions.

As former Secretary Henry L. Stimson pointed out in his letter to The Post the other day, the employment by the United States of armed force in the Far East would not only be militarily impossible but "to attempt it would do much more harm than good."

War is not the alternative to inaction; but it may prove the ultimate consequence. At any rate there is not the slightest reason in the world why peace-loving nations should cut their own throats by providing aggressors with the wherewithals to carry on their aggressions.

This is the least we can do in support of a regime of law and order in the world. And it is a long, long way from that military action which the jittery isolationists regard as the certain result of any realist appraisal of the world situation.

Columbus

By William Lyon Phelps

A Cry Of Land.

On this day, at 2 o'clock in the morning, Christopher Columbus had his patience and courage and faith rewarded. A sailor, perched high on the mast, called out that he saw land.

The fame of Columbus, always great, has grown greater during the twentieth century, and is still growing. When I was a schoolboy, none of us was aware of the date when Columbus arrived, and the twelfth of October passed yearly witout private or public comment. Now it is a legal holiday in 34 States.

The voyage of Columbus is to me a supreme example of Faith. He did not know there was land westward; he did not know that he could find it if it existed; he did not know that he would survive the voyage; he did not know that he could control his men.

This is the reason Faith is so much more exciting than knowledge. If he had known beforehand that land was there and that he would be the first to discover it, nearly all the fun of the expedition would have been lost; if he had known that such a voyage meant death before the destination, he would not have started. But it was the possibility of failure, with the unverifiable faith in success, that gave to the undertaking such an irresistible appeal to his courageous heart and mind.

Tom McCarthy

Morning Meal At The Mission.

SOMEHOW, THEY LOOKED different in the daylight. They looked more wasted and forlorn. Silently they clumped down the creaking mission stairs and plunged into the bright coldness of the street. They gathered around the doorway to curse mildly as their bodies bent forward under the lash of their coughing.

TOM McCARTHY.

The night before, their faces had been flushed with liquor. They had been "down-and-outers," as they filed into line to get their "feed and flop." But their lost eyes had held a gleam of happiness born of cheap booze.

Now, shaking in the coldness of the morning, they were merely sick, old men. They were merely sick, old men, with lost eyes and dirty clothing, standing in the accusing brightness of the morning sun.

AFTER A WHILE, because it was cold, I went back into the mission and into the auditorium. There were less there than on the evening previous. But, by 6:45, there were 80 homeless men, slouched about on the folding auditorium chairs. Two-thirds of them were more than 50 years old.

Just before the deadline for the service, three young men came in. They carried little satchels and were apparently "on-the-road." As they sat down, one remarked, "Well the food may not be any better than it was at that other joint, but at least we'll get two breakfasts this morning." They had finished their handouts at the Volunteers of America Mission around the corner, and had dropped by for a second breakfast.

Old men with frayed shirts and trousers, which did not match their coats, slouched down in their chairs to continue the sleep interrupted at 6. Up in the forepart of the hall, a big youngster with the build of a heavyweight boxer, called across to his buddy.

"I understand they're going to give out bacon and eggs this morning," he said. He laughed at his joke, but the old men did not laugh. They were past the point of laughter on such a matter as food.

"Naw, I heard, it's pork chops," his buddy yelled back, "and whether you like 'em or not, you'll eat 'em." They hooted with laughter. They knew their handout would be bread, coffee and oatmeal . . . as it always was.

• • • •

AT A FEW MINUTES to seven, a broad-shouldered young man with thick wrists and arms sat down at the piano. There was something of the hard-boiled "dandy" about him. His hair waved back from a high forehead and a thin, acquiline nose gave a sort of surly pride to his Latin face. He looked the type you'd expect to find beating out ragtime in a waterfront joint. I couldn't figure what he was doing accompanying hymns.

The preacher, at the morning service, was less demonstrative than the strident-voiced man of the night before. He was a square-faced, middle-aged man in a business suit which almost matched his slickly-parted gray hair.

He started a hymn, to the accompaniment of the pianist, and changed the key several times in the course of it. The hymn was something about the "wonderfulness of prayer," but it didn't receive much support from the audience. A few of the youngsters in the front of the room, raised their voices to the tune. And one old man in the center squawked out words in a tone which, though unintentional, was a libel to the song.

A man whose face was chunked in doughy folds peered through his glasses at hymn 62. Though he could not sing all of it, he prepared himself three or four bars in advance and, when a certain word like "prayer" was reached, he hit it hard. The others just held the books in their hands, going through the motions of singing, and a young man with a thick neck and the face of a flabby "Spencer Tracy," pared his nails with a pen knife.

After the hymn, the preacher read from the "Sermon on the Mount." He was not a skilled reader and he put the emphasis in the wrong places; but the silvered words mellowed by 2,000 years of belief, filtered through the room with a strange brightness.

After that, he called for volunteers, "willing to make their peace with Christ."

Two hands were raised furtively, to testify their belief. Then the non-hand raisers leaned forward on the row of chairs ahead, while the preacher led the prayer.

BY ROWS, under the direction of a man with a crown of white hair, a prison pallor and the face of a medieval executioner, the men of the mission filed in for the morning hand-out.

Those on my side of the room were the last to go. A fat man with a mustache and a tight sweater came in and asked if anyone would be willing to do some work around the mission. No one stirred. He went down the aisle, asking each if they were willing to do some work in exchange for what they had been given.

"Why some of you guys have lived around here for two years without doing a lick of work," he said.

"That doesn't speak very well for the mission, does it?" the pink-cheeked man in front of me said.

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Why, to think that they'd let somebody live around here for two years without doing a lick of work!" he said.

"What are you kicking about?" I asked.

"Oh, I don't belong here," he said. "I belong in this town. I'm not like these other bums. I've just been out on a bender." He turned back, very proud in the reputation he had established.

WE WENT IN for the handout. We were the last group to go in. A spindly old man in a coat which reached almost to his knees, asked if he could have the extra oatmeal. Told that he might have it, he pushed three bowls of the stuff before his place.

We ate standing up to the high board table. The coffee was almost cold and sparingly pre-sweetened. The bread was stale and wet.

As I gagged on the coffee, I looked across the board and my eyes met the eyes of a neat, little, old man I knew. He, for at least five years, has waited on me at the cigar counter of a local drugstore. I wondered if he would finish out his days at the mission. And, if so, whose fault it was.

Text of Roosevelt Speech

The text of President Roosevelt's radio address on Gen. Krzyzanowski:

Mr. Chairman, Mr. Ambassador, Ladies and Gentlemen:

In the epic struggle of the human race to govern itself Poland for centuries has been the champion of freedom. Through stress and storm whether her sun shone brightly or suffered long though temporary eclipse, she has ever fought to hold aloft the torch of human liberty.

Because we hold this ideal of liberty in common, ours has been a long and unbroken friendship with the people of Poland. From the days of our struggle to achieve nationhood, unbroken by any rift through the century and a half of our life as a Nation, the American people and the people of Poland have maintained a friendship based upon this common spiritual ideal.

Gen. Krzyzanowski, whose patriotism we commemorate today, is another link to bind us to the people from which he came in the full tide of youthful promise when shadows lay over the land which gave him birth. It is a high privilege to bear witness to the debt which this country owes to men of Polish blood. Gratefully we acknowledge the services of those intrepid champions of human freedom—Pulaski and Kosciuszko—whose very names are watchwords of liberty and whose deeds are part of the imperishable record of American independence. Out the past they speak to us to bid us guard the heritage which they helped to bestow.

They and millions of other men and women of Polish blood who have united their destinies with those of America—whether in the days of colonial settlement, in the war to attain independence, in the hard struggle out of which emerged our national unity, in the great journeyings across the Western plains to the slopes of the Pacific, on farm or in town or city—through all of our history they have made their full contribution to the upbuilding of our institutions and to the fulfillment of our national life.

These are the thoughts and reflections that come to mind today as we consign to Arlington National Cemetery the honored dust of a son of Poland who faithfully served the country of his adoption. Gen. Krzyzanowski was the embodiment of the Polish ideal of liberty. Into the making of that ancient ideal have gone the struggles and the vicissitudes of a thousand years of Polish national life. He whom we honor today, no less than those of his blood and kindred who preceded him to America or who followed him to our shores, brought to us, and with us became partakers in, a common aspiration of freedom.

Neither time nor distance could erase from stout Polish hearts the memory of a glorious struggle for liberty, a struggle which happily ended in our own day and generation in the restoration of Poland to nationhood and to her rightful place as a sovereign state. As we sympathized in her aspirations to freedom, so we rejoice in her attainment of independence.

We as a nation seek spiritual union with al who love freedom. Of many bloods and of diverse national origins, we stand before the world today as one people united in a common determination. That determination is to uphold the ideal of human society which makes conscience uperior to brute strength—the ideal which would substitute freedom for force in the governments of the world.

Coal Commission Bars Reporters

By the Associated Press.

Two hostile factions of the Bituminous Coal Commission argued four hours behind closed doors yesterday. The majority four finally acheived these results:

All existing rules, under which weekly meetings had been open to the press, were discarded.

Individual commissioners were shorn of managerial authority, and power over personnel was vested in a committee of three.

There will be no regular meetings. All will be called by the chair and will be closed to reporters.

A request by newspapermen to examine the minutes of previous meeting and the budgets of district producers' boards was denied.

The majority consisted of Chairman Charles F. Hosford, C. E. Smith, Thomas Haymond and Walter H. Maloney. The minority included Greenlee, John C. Lewis and Percy Tetlow, the latter two recommended by John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

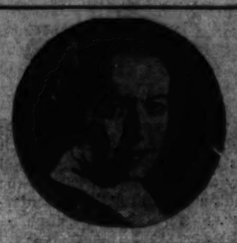
MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL



Is Man Chivalrous Who Insists on Woman's Sharing Cost of Joint Amusements, Widow Asks.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow 40 years of age, lost my husband 14 years ago, was left with three small children, was fortunate in securing a position in Washington and came here to live. I left the children with my parents until I got established, then brought them to live with me. Five years ago, I met a man my own age who is divorced. He was out of work and as I kept house, I permitted him to board with me for $8 a month. This included his laundry and I let him press his clothes so he could make a good appearance. Whenever I took my car out of an evening I always took him along. We went to free lectures and occasionally to a movie. I used my influence to help him find work and did all I could to keep up his morale.

He was with us nine months when he finally found a position away from Washington. I drove him to the town to save car fare. He visited us of week-ends, taking his meals and lodging in our home. When he had been working about six months he took me on a week-end trip to New York City to show his "appreciation." He must have spent between $60 and $70 on the trip. Later that summer, in my car, we went for his mother and sisters and took them to the beach, where we had a lovely time. . . . Then I had a severe illness and he lent me $100, which I paid back in 90 days, without interest.

* * * *

My children, now half grown, resented his attentions, saying he only used me to his advantage. A year ago we had a quarrel over the children and I gave him up. He began going with a woman 14 years older than he. She willingly paid her own way to dinner, night clubs and theaters. He tells me that in going around with her, he spends $4 or $5, and on one occasion $8.50, for his share of the evening's entertainment. With me, however, he never spent over $3 at most, and usually $2, for an evening's entertainment for both of us, as I was considerate—knowing he had been out of work so long—and wouldn't agree to expensive places.

* * * *

After about a month's separation, I was just so lonesome for his companionship that I humbled myself to contact him. He said he couldn't give up the other woman, because she had been so nice to him. We started going out together, however, but with the understanding I was to pay my own way and he was to see the other woman when he pleased. I thought it would be only a matter of time before he would give her up completely and we would be back together on the old basis. But it has gone on for over a year now, I paying my own way, he seeing the other woman.

* * * *

His mother and sisters are very much distressed about our affair. His sister visited me a week last summer. . . . Now, my question is, Do you consider him a gentleman? Do you think he has any chivalry? I want your candid opinion to compare with my children's. My 18-year-old daughter says her boy friends would be insulted if she offered to pay her way when they took her any place. I have stopped having him to Sunday dinner and when he mentioned it, I said since everything was to be 50-50, I saw no reason why I should. The situation distresses me. The man earns a good salary and I feel if he enjoys my company, he should be willing to pay my way when we go out. What do you think?

—DISTRESSED.

Cross Opportunist.

DEAR DISTRESSED: Obviously the man is not a gentleman; and as for being chivalrous, it is downright ludicrous to employ the word in connection with him. Chivalrous is the one thing above all things which he is not. He is an opportunist, pure and simple—one who takes selfish advantage of persons and situations with little regard for principle or ultimate consequences. He has classed himself under this label twice over. First, in accepting room and board from a self-dependent widow with a family to support, at a price per month which is less than the standard minimum price per week, under an arrangement which he must have known was as detrimental to her reputation as to her bank account. And, second, in abandoning her to the role of supplicant for his favors the moment his motives came under searching scrutiny and he could ally himself with another woman who was willing to make rival concessions which constituted a slightly better bargain. If further proof of his lack of principle is needed, you have it in his willingness to play off one woman against the other when both, unquestionably and to his full knowledge, are trying to buy for themselves whatever devotion he has to sell. In other words, he's selling out to both camps and delivering the goods to neither. It's low enough, forsooth, to sell one's self to the highest bidder; but the extreme of shystering has been plumbed by the person who cheats on such a noisome barter. And that's just what your erstwhile star boarder is doing.

* * * *

No wonder your children, reviewing the situation with the clear-eyed disgust of youth for unworthy conduct on the part of its elders, were roused to fighting protest — indignantly protective in your behalf, contemptuously accusatory toward the man. Your daughter is right—God bless her!—in believing a man of decent instincts would feel outraged at having a lady offer to pay her way when under his presumable social protection. He would resent the implication that he did not know and could not meet his social obligations. And he would despise or pity the woman for holding herself so cheaply as to feel that her company was not worth a nickel of any man's money. I am speaking, you understand, of gentlemen; not of a certain latter-day crop of lacquered, low-bred "good fellows" who trail in the wake, lapping up the largesse, of free-spending, bill-paying females who must have the company of men at any price.

* * * *

Although my own life moves along quiet by-paths, so to speak; far removed from the social whirligig which is the metropolitan night life of today, it comes to my ears from many informed sources that a surprising number of Washington women follow, just as you have followed, this short-sighted practice of bargaining and bidding, covertly and tacitly, for the company of noon-too-scrupulous and none-too-fastidious male escorts. So long as they continue to do so, so long will women like yourself wind up holding the empty bag of humiliation, desolation and heartache.

His problem will be answered here tomorrow.

Black in Contrasting Styling for Daytime and Evening

AN old-fashioned theme in a chic new-fashioned interpretation, is shown in the black evening gown below, topped with a basque-like jacket embroidered in glittering paillettes. The material is Lyons velvet, of the type your grandmother wore for her "best" dress; the styling is appropriately named, Romance. Note the front fullness of the skirt, shoulder detail and unusual high collar of the jacket. The hem is faced with bright red silk, giving a bit of color to the all-black evening gown, as one dances. Worn with the fitted jacket, the ensemble becomes a quaintly smart dinner costume; a zipper closing helps to accent the molded lines.

SMART simplicity for daytime, distinguishes the black frock above. The unique drawstring-like neckline is finished with silk tassels, high-lighted by mirrored cylinders; they are repeated at th waistline in the soft narrow belt. The tiny hat with short veil, suede gloves and bag are black. Both costumes designed by Germaine Monteil, and were shown at Weinbergers opening yesterday.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Oct. 11.

THE BIG HOUSE style shows are about over for the early autumn. Now the solitary, exclusive and talented young women who are strictly on their own are displaying the high-class duds they have designed for their classy clienteles. A few nights ago I went to one of the most interesting — that of Muriel King, one of the large raft of Seattle girls who have won fame and fortune here.

ALICE HUGHES

Muriel is a tall, rangy, handsome girl, who looks even better in her own clothes than do the cash customers. This year she has followed the current trend, gone very daring and opened a lavish four-story salon of her own, at a good address in the East Fifties. It's done in sea pink and sandy green, with sea shells for the principal decoration to carry out the maritime motif. And in this flossy setting Muriel showed 35 costumes to a fine, fancy audience, which included Ina Claire, as well as "society."

Three colors dominated the collection—mauve, pink and pine-tree green. Oh, of course, Muriel realized the smart and sensible inevitably of black, and promenaded six of these. Among the interesting little numbers were country clothes in nubby woolens, ornamented with embroidery and flowers. Interesting, in spite of the fact I seldom go to the country. The costume that drew the gustiest "ohs" was an afternoon dress of white wool worn with a bleached, off-white skunk jacket. It was worth a good round "oh," too.

These New York dressmakers are a brave and able lot. Depending in the main on a few rich clients, they gallantly go in for big buildings of their own—an enormous gamble. Let's hope that big Muriel and her ilk never go bust!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In just one week, these name-known women trudged into the shop of one of my favorite hat-runners-up and picked up a few new sky-pieces: Margalo Gilmore, Mrs. Ogden L. Mills, Miss Gusti Andre (the magnificent model), Miss Gloria Baker (prize deb up to now), Miss Pauline duPont and Miss Jane Cowl. That's quite an assortment—from many fields of activity, or none! . . .

* * * *

Robert Montgomery, the movie man, came into town with no fanfare or furor, thereby thwarting the fiendish little girls and went immediately to his beloved small farm at nearby Brewster, where he will restore his tissues until summoned again by Hollywood. He has just finished a film called "Live, Love and Learn." Ah, if we only could, and did! . . . * * * *

As predicted, "Stage Door," with Hepburn and Ginger Rogers, has been packing the big Radio City Music Hall with delighted devotees . . . * * * *

Pauletta Goddard, the pretty little girl who either is Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin, or isn't as the case may be, has been spending a lot of time here lately, buying clothes and up to the armpits in rumors that she is to be the Scarlett in "Gone With the Wind." Never has there been so much salami-publicity spilled about a movie role. I hope that by the time this is printed all the hoo-rah is over.

'Shocking' Is Title Of New Perfume

Schiaparelli, the daring Parisian designer, has again created a sensation in the fashion world; this time it is a new perfume called "shocking." The bottle is quaint in a giddy sort of way. It was inspired by the dummy of Mae West's figure which she sent to Paris so that Schiaparelli could design clothes for her forthcoming picture. The replica of the dressmaker's dummy, with its tiny waistline, generous bosom, and swelling hips, is suggestive of the Gay Nineties. A Victorian glass bell with a frosty white lace ruffle painted around the base, covers the bottle and the whole thing comes in a box lined with "shocking pink" satin—a startling new magenta shade which is one of the leading colors in the Schiaparelli collection.

Rich Materials, Simple Lines Mark Winter Fashion Show

Original Creations of Germaine Monteil Displayed at New Connecticut Avenue Shop; Romantic Evening Gowns Exhibited.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

DRAMATIC and distinctive fall and winter fashions were featured in a gala promenade at Weinberger's, a new Connecticut avenue shop yesterday. The gowns and suits featured original creations by Germaine Monteil. Hats by Lilly Dache were shown. Rich materials, plus simplicity of line marked the clothes of Monteil, a noted couturiere. The millinery was designed to carry out the same styling as the costumes. The commentator for the fashion presentation was Ralph Breed, outstanding New York stylist.

Among the 100 models shown were dinner dresses, featuring the popular street length, and those touching the floor with long sleeves and low-cut decolletage in back and front. The majority of these were of black novelty silk crepe, with touches of bright color, or the glitter of jeweled or mirrored motifs. The very short Eton jacket was exploited—made of hammered antique gold lame, and topping a halter-front evening gown of the same fabric.

Slipper satin, in black and lovely blues, was much in evidence for formal evening; also, velvets in romantic stylings, trimmed with massive appliques of gold kidskin. Metal mesh sleeves, a medieval influence, dramatized the "don't dress for dinner" type of dress; also, yokes or sleeves of knotted fringe.

General day-time dresses, molded as to silhouette and distinctive of neckline, flaunted short, bracelet, and long sleeves. They were made of silk crepe and sheer woolens, sometimes combining the two materials.

In the realm of suits, the predominating note was the woolen frock, topped by a short, fitted jacket of self-material, trimmed with silver or cross fox collar, matched with a huge muff of the same fur. For day wear, black led the color parade, with deep green, soft blue, rust and brown sharing honors about equally.

While Weinberger's is new to Washington, the name is well known throughout the country for smart shops in Nashville, Louisville and Atlanta. The four shops are run by members of the Weinberger family, the original in Nashville, having been started in 1906. Both Paris and American creations will be sponsored by the new Washington shop, which will cater to discriminating women of all ages.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Effects of Music.

Music is employed in very modern institutions for the treatment of functional disorders.

It has a long record as a form of therapy—a record which is incarcerated in the proverbs and poetry. It "hath power to sooth the savage heart." "If music be the food of love, play on."

The effect of music on the functions of the body have been studied. Long ago the French musician, Gretry, recorded his observations on his pulse. "I placed three fingers of my right hand on the artery of my left arm and sang to myself, an air, the tempo of which was in accord with the action of my pulse; some little time afterward I sang with great ardor in a different tempo, when I distinctly felt my pulse quickening, or slackening its action to accommodate itself by degrees to the tempo of the new air."

The truth of this has been demonstrated, eliminating the personal influence. Thus when the following compositions were played, the effect on the pulse rate was recorded thus:

	Pulse Before	After
"Marche de Faust" (Gounod)	81	87
"Marche Hongroise" (Berlioz)	86	91
"Chant" (Wagner)	69	83
"La Recontre Faust"	73	83

On blood pressure the effect of three different kinds of musical compositions was tried. The slow, tragic movements of Tschaikowski's "Death Symphony" caused a fall of blood pressure from 110 to 102. The "Toreador" from "Carmen" raised it again to 112. And the lively march of Sousa's "National Emblem" raised it to 120.

The effect of music on the brain is the subject of several anecdotes. Filippe Palma, the singer, was forever falling in debt, and one day when a particularly wrathful creditor entered his house and vituperated him, Palma sat down at the harpischord and began to play so soothingly that the creditor tore up his account and even provided Palma with money to pay his other accounts. That is a gift worth having.

Actually, experiments show that music will either accelerate or diminish the action of the knee jerk, depending on whether it is lively or sad and showing a direct effect on nervous responses.

Music increases metabolism, increases or decreases muscular energy, depending on what kind of music is played. It accelerates respiration, lowers the threshold for sensory stimuli, and by affecting the emotions influences the internal secretions.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Shorter Skirts This Year Place Emphasis on Shapely Legs.

By Ida Jean Kain.

LATEST quotations in skirt lengths place the hemline 14 inches from the floor. This is the highest skirts have been since 1928, when they reached the height of something or other and made the feminine world acutely leg-conscious.

Generally speaking, legs are at their best when the weight is normal and there is good muscle tone. Good musculature, however, sometimes overcomes a weight handicap. The thin girl who gets plenty of walking, swimming and biking is likely to have presentable limbs.

A case in point is that of a young woman whose job required her to walk for miles every day. Through excessive nerve strain and the inability to rest sufficiently, she lost 17 pounds—weight she could ill afford to lose, as she was slightly underweight to begin with. Because of the enforced exercise, which developed strong leg muscles, her calf measurement of 12¾ inches was unaffected by this drastic loss in weight.

Muscles Control Leg Contour.

In contrast, you will occasionally see a girl who has always been overweight but who has brought her weight down through rigorous diet and very little exercise—particularly exercise of the type which uses the leg muscles. As the result of such a program, her legs may be too small, whereas, they had been too large. Regardless of weight, the invalid who does not use her legs finds them getting thinner and thinner. Muscles atrophy from disuse, and musculature is the controlling factor in leg contour.

Although legs have been more or less in the limelight since 1928, the new skirt length has increased the demand for corrective exercises. In Hollywood, as you might suppose, the interest in leg exercise is particularly keen. Louise Hovick (Gypsy Rose Lee), likes to walk barefoot in the sand for leg exercise. This beautiful newcomer to the films believes the increased effort of walking against the shifting sand brings more muscles into use.

Over on the Warner Brothers lot, where Louis Hippe is in charge of athletics for the stars and players, exercise is the thing. As lovely examples of musculature versus weight, he points out Joan Blondel and Marie Wilson. Only a few pounds stand between Miss Blondel, Hippe says, and a studio order to reduce, while Miss Wilson has been officially urged to gain. From the legs of these two screen beauties one would never suspect any weight threat, and their splendid leg musculature is the reason.

If your legs fail to measure up to beauty, do something about them. Concentrate on sports—the ones I mentioned are excellent—or specific exercise to tone and firm the muscle tissue. For legs that are too heavy, take exercises that stretch and pull the muscles. Skimpy legs need contracting and stretching exercises to develop the muscles and round the contours.

This strengthens the feet and beautifies the legs.

Contour of Limbs Rests Upon Musculature From Exercise.

Heel Discrimination.

Don't choose your heels to regulate your height, a mid-western shoe stylist advises.

"If you are tall," he declares, "another inch or so won't matter, and if you're short, stilt-like spikes won't make you look like a goddess. Bear in mind always that with certain costumes high heels are a definite must and with others nothing but low heels will do."

Windsors Will Be Welcome Mrs. Roosevelt Implies

First Lady Says She Would 'Be Delighted' to Show the Duke and Duchess Through Greenbelt; Has Busy Birthday Schedule.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Back in the White House after being "off-the-record" for three months, Mrs. Roosevelt implied yesterday at her first press conference of the season that if, and when, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor come to Washington they will be welcome at the White House.

HOPE R. MILLER.

She said she would "be delighted" to show them Greenbelt and any other Federal housing projects in which she has been interested, if they desire her assistance. She added, however, that she knows "nothing about their proposed visit except what has been in the newspapers."

Asked if she had met the Duke, she said she did when he came to Washington as the Prince of Wales in 1919, and that she remembered seeing him at a number of formal parties "where he always sat between Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Lansing and behaved beautifully." She has not met the Duchess.

Chances are if the Duke and Duchess arrive in the Capital early in November they will miss Mrs. Roosevelt as she will be away most of that month on a lecture tour that will take her to Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee, Ohio and Missouri.

With a glow of summer's tan still on her cheeks and a decidedly rested expression in her eyes, the First Lady for well over an hour answered a wide variety of questions touching on everything from the Windsors to when Il Duce's son was to be received at the White House. Incidentally, she revealed that the President's gift to her on her fifty-third birthday was a water-tight wrist watch that can be worn "even in swimming."

Has Crowded Birthday Schedule

The press conference was only one item on the First Lady's busy birthday schedule, which began with a horseback ride early yesterday morning and wound up with a family dinner last evening at which there was a birthday cake bearing 21 candles, according to Roosevelt tradition.

At noon, Mrs. Roosevelt conferred with the advisory committee of the Arthurdale Co-operative Community in West Virginia. Later, she visited officials at the Madeira School, where Elizabeth Henderson, 15-year-old daughter of Mrs. Roosevelt's first cousin, Mrs. Forest Henderson, of Stamford, Conn., is enrolled. Mrs. Henderson was Mrs. Roosevelt's godchild. Elizabeth will spend the winter at the White House.

Late yesterday afternoon Mrs. Roosevelt met Vittorio Mussolini, and the latter's Washington host, the Italian Ambassador, Fulvio de Suvich, shortly after they arrived to call on the President. Afterward she received birthday congratulations from a few close friends who visited briefly at the White House.

According to plans revealed at the press conference only members of the Roosevelt family were present at the birthday dinner. Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt were to be there, and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, jr., were expected to arrive from Charlottesville, Va.

Lecture Tour To Begin in Iowa

Dates for the White House social season are soon to be announced, she said further, and a schedule will shortly be completed for a lecture tour she will make in the Middle West next month, beginning with an engagement in Des Moines, Iowa, November .

Mrs. Roosevelt expects to leave tomorrow for Philadelphia, where she will speak at a luncheon meeting of the Annual Congress of the American Prison Association, and later that day at Atlantic City, N. J. She will then go to Hyde Park for a couple of days, returning to New York on Friday for a Girls Scout broadcast. Avering that her plans for the next few weeks are "very elastic," she said she did not know exactly when she would be back at the White House.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore ivory satin with a tulle veil fastened with orange blossoms, and carried roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor, Miss Helen Elizabeth Wedding, the bride's sister, wore a gown of rose moire. The bridesmaids were the Misses Miriam Fort, Betty Taylor, Charlotte Lee Truman, and Marjorie Adelaide Wedding, another sister. They wore wine-colored moire frocks and carried fall flowers.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

JAMES ROOSEVELT, who takes his legal residence in Massachusetts seriously, has purchased an estate in Framingham, about 15 miles southwest of Boston.

DUDLEY HARMON.

His house is situated in a wealthy section called "Tory Row," and this zealous Democrat will have as neighbors Frank D. Comerford, president of the New England Power and Boston Edison Co.; Charles F. Adams, sportsman and chain store executive, and John R. McComber, whose estate, Racelands, is the scene of a fashionable race meet each spring.

The main part of the house is 150 years old, but the rest of the building rambles, having been added later. On the first floor are a living room, library, music room, dining room and sun parlor. Outside are 200 acres, a sunken rose garden and an orchard of some 75 apple trees. The estate, which is valued at aproximately $45,000, also includes a stable and dairy, a four-car garage and a caretaker's house.

It was not stated when the Roosevelts plan to move. At present they are established in their home on O street, in Georgetown.

PROBABLY THE ONLY dinner ever given at the Italian Embassy, where the men wore business suits, was that held Saturday evening for Vittorio Mussolini. At the last minute it was discovered that the luggage of Il Duce's son included neither tuxedo nor tails, so all the men invited had to be hastily called and asked to appear in their working clothes. The women, however, wore full evening dress and the whole party adjourned soon after dinner to the Chevy Chase Club for dancing.

WASHINGTON, so far, never has been a particularly "tweedy" city, women here running instead to little numbers of lame or brocade. But perhaps there will be a revival of interest in the material. Boston girls swear by now that Mrs. Studley Myers has opened a little "shoppe" here with Valerie Prochnik de Sibour, daughter of the Austrian minister and Mme. Prochnik, to assist her.

The shop also specializes in suede, and there are entire coats and dresses made of this material. Located at 1705 Connecticut avenue, the store opened yesterday with much fanfare.

Mrs. Myers dabbled in suedes last year with Mrs. McKenney Mallan, and Valerie de Sibour was a saleslady in a smart dress shop before giving up her job for marriage. The tweeds are made by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Chatfield—the latter is a sister of Breckinridge Long, former Ambassador to Italy.

EVERYBODY IN the State Department seems now not only to have a new title, but also a new address. The Maynard Barnes, the latest to move, are at Stoneleigh Court and will rent their Georgetown home this winter . . . Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe will pay a flying visit of two or three hours to Washington, only to return again to her Newport home until December 1 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson—he is with our consulate at Prague—are now at the Rhode Island resort and were dinner guests over the weekend of Countess Laszla Szechenyi . . . Nathan Bartlett, one of our bachelors who are seen everywhere, will return late this month from Long Beach, Calif., and will be at 1908 Q street again this year . . . Mrs. Henry Leonard is expected back in Georgetown October 20 and when last heard of was planning a few days in New York after a summer on her ranch in the West. Maj. Leonard probably will return with her.

TELEPHONES JANGLE madly, 15 extra girls pound typewriter keys, and everybody goes crazy at the headquarters here of the International Horse Show. Mrs. Ellen Perry and Miss Katherine DeLashmutt had some fun the other day when Commissioner Melvin Hazen lent them his car, bearing license tag number 1, in which they drove around delivering posters . . . To avoid confusion, tags this year will be a different color every day of the show: First white, then pink, blue and yellow . . . And, girls, only one member of the Belgian team will bring a wife with him to our city, according to word from the Belgian Embassy.

Church Aides to Speak At Inter-Racial Parley

Mrs. Frank Linzel and Miss Etta Mai Russell Invited to Conference of Women at Asbury Park.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Recognition of the outstanding work carried on by the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches has been given in the invitation extended to Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, its president, and Miss Etta Mai Russell, its juvenile court worker, to address the Interracial Conference of Church Women in Asbury Park, N. J., Thursday and Friday of this week. Women from various parts of this country and from abroad are on the program, including Miss Muriel Lester, head resident of Kingsley House, in London, who was guest of honor at a large luncheon given at the Mayflower, when she visited here last spring.

Mrs. Linzel, who has directed work among the foreign born, and Miss Russell, whose social service program is chiefly among the colored children, will address the general session of the conference Thursday afternoon on "Joining Hands in a Common Purpose." Miss Margaret Jones, of International Student House, also will attend.

Prepare for Opening Of Annual Institute

Preparations are under way for the annual Missionary Institute of the Woman's Council here on October 26, 27 and 28 at the First Congregational Church. Final plans will be discussed at a general meeting of the Woman's Council next Monday in the Congregational Church. There will be a business meeting at 11 and a luncheon at 1, when Dr. Will Winton Alexander will be the speaker.

Dr. Alexander, who is now administrator of the Federal Farm Security Administration, is a former Methodist minister, was American delegate to the International Missionary Conference in Jerusalem in 1928 and is chairman of the National Committee for Social Study.

Another session preliminary to the institute will be that of the juvenile court department of the Woman's Council, of which Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton is chairman. The fall and winter program will be outlined at an autumn rally on Friday, October 22, at the Luther Place Memorial Church on Thomas circle.

The Rev. William R. Moody, of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, president of the Board of Religious Education of the Washington Diocese, will speak at the morning session on "The Church's Responsibility for Serving the Delinquent Child." Mrs. Linzel will discuss the work of the department and, in the afternoon, Miss Russell will review the summer program and present an outline of plans for the alley Christmas trees.

Movies to Show Work of Summer

She will do more than talk about the work of the past summer. She will show movies of the camps, the toy truck and doll adoption program in Navy place alley; of the vacation Bible schools and the "happy hours for children." She will bring to the doorstep of the membership the work it has supported but which has seemed somewhat remote to all but the few who have been directly concerned with it. The council's community service has grown steadily in proportion and influence.

Luncheon will be served at noon with Miss A. Barbara Wiegand, vice president of the Woman's Council, as hostess; Mrs. Arthur Briscoe, treasurer, hostess for the day, and Mrs. Frank Berger, president of the Woman's Council of the church, chairman of arrangements.

Leaders of the institute will include Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, Mrs. Dan B. Brummitt, Miss Margaret Applegarth and Miss Gertrude Schultz. A mass meeting October 24 will precede the formal opening October 26. The Rev. E. L. Ford will preside at the mass meeting and Mrs. Linzel will bring greetings. Mrs. Overton will speak on "The New Person and the New World."

Mrs. Frank A. Edgington will preside at the Tuesday session; Mrs. George A. Ross at that on Wednesday and Mrs. Linzel on Thursday.

Arts Club Fair This Week Will Have Cabaret

Foire Aux Croutes Slated to Begin Thursday at Old Mansion.

A Cabaret de la Vache Enragee, otherwise "Cabaret of the Mad Bull" will be among the attractions at the forthcoming Foire aux Croutes, which the Arts Club of Washington will hold for three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It will be at the clubhouse, 2015-17 E street, the historic old mansion which housed the White House family during repairs on the Executive Mansion in President Madison's Administration, and was the home of James Monroe when he was Secretary of State.

This cabaret, under the guiding hand of Mme. Felian Garzia, will be installed in the club dining room, and will present a bar, a wine shop and other "atmosphere" suitable to its character. Strolling musicians will sing for the patrons. The singers will be Germaine Johnson, Harry Angelico, Haygood Browne and others. Felian Garzia himself as the mayor of the Free Community of Montmartre, assisted by such gay Parisiennes as Mme. Garzia, Mrs. Charles Whitsey, Katherine Morrison, and others, will see to it that the Cabaret is a gay rendezvous.

Not far away will be the little Waffle Shop, to be presided over by Mrs. Norman Anderson and a coterie of "waffle girls." The Potboilers Fair will begin at 2 p. m. continuing until 10 p. m. and later, each of the three days rain or shine.

A Flower Mart under Mrs. Ralph Richard's watchful eye, will send through the crowds attractive flower girls in foreign costumes, and cigarette vendors. The girls, Fenella Castenado, Virginia and Kathleen Clifford, Alexandrine Rowan, Carolyn Cecil, Louise Popham, Elizabeth Finley, Nancy Saltsman, Ruth Kent, Jane Duenner, Alice Richardson and Barbara Patterson, will also sell candy at this gay booth with its striped awnings and garden chairs.

The evening show, the Arts Club Follies under the supervision of Maud Howell Smith, and under the direction of Ben Smart, will intrigue the interest of the crowd, for it will be a really truly Parisian revue, with dancing and singing.

2 Latin Ministers Talk at Press Club

The Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Hector David Castro, and the Minister of the Dominican Republic, Dr. Andres Pastoriza, will be speakers at the opening session today of the Coffee Festival at the National Press Club. Through the courtesy of the Minister of Colombia, Senor Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, the latter's private collection of stamps with coffee designs will be on display.

The coffee fete will close October 17 with a banquet at the National Press Club at which the Ambassador of Brazil, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, and the Minister of Colombia will be speakers.

It is hoped to make the affair, which is under the sponsorship of the West River Yacht Club, an annual event.

Bill Hendrix is president of the organization which includes the young people's groups from 14 churches in the District, with a membership of about 300. Tonight's business meeting, at which a program of fun for the young picnic guests will be outlined is to be followed by a party for the planners—a dance beginning at 10 o'clock at the parish hall.

At the picnic, each member of the fellowship will take responsibility for one small guest. There will be games in the afternoon, followed by a picnic supper and weiner roast and a camp fire program in the evening. It will be the first corporate social service project of the young people of the diocese and they look forward to enjoying it as much as the children do.

Radio Methods Are Explained To Writers Club

Morse Salisbury, U. S. Aide, Tells of Retraining for Special Field.

Radio writing means writing for the ear rather than the eye and requires considerable retraining on the part of the writer, Morse Salisbury, of the Department of Agriculture, told members of the Professional Writers Club of the Y. W. C. A. at their meeting last night.

In radio there is no approach through the sense of sight, said Mr. Morse, and much more importance is placed on cadence, rhythm and simplicity of language there than in writing for print. A word missed is a word lost, and the style one learned at school must be modified to suit the medium of radio.

Illustrating the various phases of writing "on the air," Mr. Morse used the informative talk, dialogue and the dramatic sketch. He also touched the general field of radio drama and radio advertising copy and said radio offered a profitable field to writers.

Miss Myrta Ethel Cawood presided. Other officers include Florence A. Dieterich, vice president; Nell V. Smith, recording secretary; Anna Jseperson, corresponding secretary; Catherine Heinold, treasurer; Louise Kline, historian; Frances Storm, registrar; Zella Boteler, librarian; Agnes Trimble, auditor; C. Virginia Diedel, parliamentarian; Katheryn M. Doherty, counsel; Elizabeth F. Ketchum, Y. W. C. A. liaison officer; Cornelia Compson, house chairman; Helen L. Hector, membership, and Maud M. Hutcheson, publicity chairman.

U.S. Increases Crop Estimates On Wheat, Corn

Federal Experts Predict Higher Yield Than in 'Any Recent Year.'

the short crop of 1936. It topped the 2,354,772,000-bushel five-year average of corn production for 1928-32.

Forecasts of an 886,895,000-bushel wheat crop compared with 626,461,000 bushels last year and the five-year average of 864,532,000 bushels for 1928-32.

As the grain outlook improved, prices for both wheat and corn had turned downward sharply last week. The drop in wheat prices was attributed by the Department of Agriculture to a reduced foreign market caused by increased Russian wheat offerings and improvement in the Argentine wheat outlook.

Stocks Below Average.

The department said stocks of wheat next summer still will be 50,000,000 bushels below the average prior to the large accumulations in 1929-33. World supplies are expected to be about 60,000,000 bushels larger than last year's, it was said. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics has predicted the United States will export about 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in the next year, leaving a wheat carry-over next July of around 200,000,000 bushels.

While probable exports of wheat have been reduced, and probable carryover pushed higher, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in a recent review of the wheat situation said "prospective utilization" of the crop has been increased "largely to allow for additional wheat for feeding."

Following on the heels of the bumper cotton crop forecast, the slightly higher yields predicted for corn and wheat were used yesterday by crop control advocates as additional argument for a special session of Congress to meet the 1938 crop surplusage. Congress already has agreed to make pending crop control legislation first order of business.

With favorable weather, increased yields were predicted for a wide range of other products. Grain sorghum yields were estimated at 97,299,000 bushels, nearly double last year's production. The department said "fruits are so uniformly heavy that the total tonnage will probably be a new record." Apple estimates were put at 206,716,000 bushels, compared with 117,506,000 last year.

Large crops were in prospect for rye, rice, beans, peanuts, potatoes and sweet potatoes. The tobacco forecast was for 1,474,683 pounds, 28 per cent above the 1936 crop and 5 per cent above the five-year average. Feed grain and hay were said to be "ample", to feed livestock.

Episcopal Bishops Vote to Give All Temporal Power to Perry

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Oct 11.—The House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church voted informally late today to turn over the administration of the denomination to its presiding bishop, who already is the spiritual leader. The present head of the church is Bishop James DeWolf Perry.

The action, taken in committee of the whole, must be confirmed by the house in regular session, probably tomorrow.

Meanwhile, the House of Deputies at the general convention began a warm debate on a recommendation to liberalize the church marriage and divorce laws.

The House of Bishops also decided in committee that the presiding bishop, now elected for a six-year term, should hold office until he reaches the age of 70, and steps toward selecting a see for him.

The presiding bishop would be the church's chief administrative authority by being elected president of the National Board of Directors. He already serves as chairman of the council, but another bishop acts as president.

The house, again in committee, voted to appoint a vice president who would assist in administration.

The question of changing the presiding bishop's title was not acted upon after the Right Rev. Irving P. Johnson, Bishop of Colorado, declared that, conferring the name of "archbishop" would be a "calamity."

Bishop Johnson said that "if we are to have an archbishop, let's have eight of them (one for each province) so that they won't be so important."

primary obligations of distributive justice. Congress failed to tax those who have in order to provide elementary necessities for those who have not."

He concluded with an appeal for contributions to what he called a "cause of causes." "These little ones of today are the men and women of tomorrow; the men and women whom we look to for other generations of strong, robust, God-fearing, useful citizens," he said. "A dollar or two now will bring dividends tomorrow, in the form of happy, contented, loyal citizenry."

The address was broadcast over Station WRC.

The advance sale of tickets for the benefit boxing carnival Monday night at Griffith Stadium indicates that a large sum will be raised for the fund through this means. By yesterday nearly 3,000 tickets had been sold by policemen and firemen alone. Walter S. Boss, of No. 2 Engine Company, gave the committee three checks totaling $17 last night, all contributed by persons to whom he sold tickets.

St. Matthew's Church was the first to turn in the special collection taken Sunday, when local churches observed "Children's Day." The Rev. Edward L. Buckey, rector of the church, sent the committee a check for $105.

A donation of $300 was received from local Elks. The Veterans of Foreign Wars contributed $25.

Order to Stop Pickets Sought By D. C. Store

Lansburgh's Contends It Is Unable to Break Delivery Contract.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Court yesterday ordered the local chapter of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers and two of its officers to show cause tomorrow why it should not be enjoined from picketing the Lansburgh and Bro., Inc., department store.

The suit, filed by the firm of Lyon & Lyon declared the store was being picketed because it has a noncancelable contract with the Merchants Transfer and Storage Co. for the delivery of its merchandise. Store Manager Austin S. Donaldson, it was alleged, had been called upon by the union to cancel its contract with the delivery association, which is engaged in a labor controversy with its employes.

The store declared picketing threatens to injure its business. Pickets parading in front of the store keep patrons away, the suit said, and interfere with the sale of more than $1,000,000 worth of merchandise on hand. Much of the merchandise, it was pointed out, is seasonal and must be disposed of.

As a further cause for injunction, the store expresed fear that the goodwill it has built up during its 77 years may be injured through union activities.

The suit asked for an injunction to prevent the union from picketing or using other publicity against the store and to restrain it from fostering any boycott.

Pickets appeared in front of the store on Friday, when the store had continued to use the transfer company facilities in making deliveries. It was pointed out that to accede to union demands would be a breach of contract with the transfer company and would make the store liable for damages.

Sophomores Move To Relieve Poverty Of Freshman Spirit

The vigilance committee of the sophomore class at the University of Maryland yesterday charged this year's group of freshman students with exhibiting "an unprecedented lack of spirit" and promised to take appropriate steps to instill in them the proper reverence for campus traditions and respect for upper classmen.

In a statement by Carl Golier, acting president of the committee, the freshman class was termed woefully indifferent toward the following regulations:

Wearing of "rat hats." Reverence for campus traditions. Knowledge of cheers, yells and songs. Attendance at pep rallies and other campus rallies. Respect for upper classmen and for the campus "hello habit."

Beware The Cough From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many cough remedies, such as Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, and fluid extract of Licorice Root, but it also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect, and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote, perfectly blended with all of these so that it will reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by both adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of people, who really know their drugs, use Creomulsion in their own families, realizing that this excellent preparation aids nature to soothe the inflamed mucous membranes, to heal the irritated tissues, and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion "tops" for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible, and active in going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is generally found satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritation, especially those stubborn ones that start as just a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained from the very first bottle of Creomulsion. Don't worry through another sleepless night—use Creomulsion.

Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product, and the relief that you want. (Adv.)

Our Family puts up a Whiskey as Tasty as flapjacks and country sausage!

We never turn down Farmer Smollett's invitations!

When we go fishing or berrying up Farmer Smollett's way, we always make for the path that takes you close by his cabin, in hopes he'll ask us to stop by for flapjacks. When he's cooking up a batch, there's the loveliest smells comes floating through the woods out of his skillet I ever smelt. It starts us running towards his cabin like anything!

Harry E. Wilken

It's the personal recipe of us Wilkens who've been distilling for over 50 years!

If you can hardly wait to eat when you look at juicy little country sausages in a sizzling skillet bubbling and popping their heads off—then you and me think just about the same. Those elegant little sausages and a big stack of brown flapjacks with real rich syrup all over them and melted country butter oozing out from in between them—that's what I call tasty!

And that's what I mean when I say this personal whiskey recipe of ours is tasty. It's something you wouldn't scarcely expect to find in a whiskey if it wasn't for the fact our Family's been spending our whole lives learning all the little whichways that make a whiskey specially mild and tasty. If you stack Our Family's Whiskey alongside of country sausages, I just couldn't say which is tastier. Anyways, you sure ought to try The Wilken Family Whiskey if you want something real good tasting!

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

Cheerful news: The economy wave has reached the Navy . . . Admiral Leahy has issued a memorandum to the gob and marine bureaucrats to be a bit more frugal about air mail postage stamps . . . Might save enough in a decade to buy a 16-inch shell.

* * * *

Washington is probably one of the most hatless towns in the world . . . Half the men on the street are bareheaded . . . Only those wear hats who have a certain dignity to preserve; and I must confess a man looks a touch more impressive in a hat. So far the Cabinet members have clung to their headgear.

* * * *

A Capital partriarch realized somewhat dolefully the other day that only 6 Senators and 12 Representatives are still in Congress, of the 500-odd who were here when he came to town, with high knee-action, back in 1917 . . . The only way to remedy that is to elect younger members, who are better insurance risks.

* * * *

"—the navy goes frugal."

One championship Washington does hold . . . Not in baseball, but in the proportion of women "gainfully" occupied, in which the Capital is about twice as well off as the rest of the country . . . Some of them are Government stenographers who can spell fairly well, too. This should be a happy hunting ground for weary young men with a taste for the more abundant life via a wife who brings home the bacon . . . Next to Reno, in fact, a young man can have most fun in Washington.

* * * *

Another of my favorite things in town to ogle is the great relief map of South America in the Pan-American Museum, at a scale of only 33 miles to the inch . . . I seem to learn as much about South America staring at it as I did when I flew around South America a few years ago . . . I wonder if there's such a relief map of North America in the neighborhood.

* * * *

Yesterday, on his second public appearance, Justice Hugo Black still seemed slightly on the spot . . . When Chief Justice Hughes mentioned his name, Mr. Black's face twitched a little; a wan smile flashed across his face and vanished . . . Perhaps his worst fault is that he never was a klorporation kounsel.

* * * *

A typical tidbit of Dixie statesmanship is Senator Connally's flare-up at the proposal to make wives and husbands file a joint income tax return . . . The Hon. Connally opposes the measure on ground of chivalry; it isn't fair to deprive Texas women of separate returns, and their husbands of lower taxes . . . Of course, the fact that the ladies of Texas (and the men) might have to pay more in taxes doesn't matter an iota to Senator Connally; it's the chivalry of the thing that counts.

* * * *

Potomac trifles: A newsboy at Vermont and K is doing well for himself by yelling "War is coming, better get on your uniform!" . . . Must have a pipeline to inner circles . . . If Washingtonians could vote on the suitability of some of the foreign diplomats some of the foreign governments would be surprised . . . The son of Kentucky's Senator Barkley (who is the 1940-man-of-the-week among the Presidential possibilities) is quite a young intellectual—about town.

* * * *

"—Capital needs Pied Pipers."

* * * *

One reason why this site was chosen for the Capital City was that the 13 colonies wouldn't give the Federal Government any better land; it was rather swampy and didn't seem to be fit for much else . . . There are some spots in town, so natives tell me, which are actually below sea level (maybe some of the night clubs), and the heroic Commerce Building is built on an old slough . . . The fact that the location was handy to George Washington's house may have had something to do with it, too.

* * * *

What the town really needs from the New Deal (even more than the vote) is a Pied Piper, or a regiment of Pied Pipers . . . Almost five pages in the phone book are devoted to exterminators of various pests . . . (They say Army and Navy people bring back strange and wondrous motifs from distant places) . . . I wonder whether the seven ladies in Congress are afraid of mice . . . Just as a matter of taste, I'd rather face a small, good-natured tiger.

* * * *

Secretary Wallace has a theory that the citizenry is a little suspicious of Washington; that it is more apt to believe something it hears from another town, or reads beneath another dateline, or at least to deem it more important . . . Part of this may be due to the fact that when an official bestirs himself to pack and travel somewhere, he is more apt to cut loose and say more that matters than he does in Washington, where he is so often forced to say so much that doesn't matter.

Evan H. Tucker Heads Civic Group 44th Time

EVAN H. TUCKER.

Accepting the election that marks his fourty-forth consecutive year as president of the Northwest Washington Citizens Association, Evan H. Tucker last night assured members of his continued efforts on behalf of the association and presented a five-point tax resolution as his last official act of his forty-third year with the organization.

The resolution, unanimously adopted by the association, opposed any increase in taxation for the District and recommended a committee be appointed by the Commissioners to make a comprehensive study of the problem. The committee, composed of District officials and citizens, would be directed to submit a more equitable method of taxation.

Tucker pointed out that a large proportion of taxable property in the District has been taken over by rapid expansion of the Federal Government, and expressed doubt the District government would be able to meet present budgetary requirements.

Less Income, More Taxes.

"Although the Government is constantly taking away our sources of income, it is at the same time, constantly demanding higher rates of taxation," Tucker asserted.

Other items in the resolution adopted by the association included a motion that the Federal Government be requested to pay a just proportion of the expenses of the District government; an expression of opposition to a bond issue for any purpose, and a recommendation that budgets for the District in the future be confined to current revenues, plus the contribution of the Federal Government.

All officers were re-elected with the exception of John F. Callan, financial secretary, who died in July. Those re-elected were Roscoe Jenkins, first vice president; F. M. Painter, second vice president; E. C. Wordern, treasurer, and Joseph Notes, secretary. Daniel Gilbert is the new financial secretary.

A resolution providing that meetings of the association be postponed until January, due to adjournment of Congress, was adopted.

Piney Branch Citizens.

Opposition to the use of the Tuberculosis Hospital at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest as an annex to Gallinger Hospital, announced tentatively last week by the District Commissioners, was voted last night by the Piney Branch Citizens Association at a meeting at Roosevelt High School.

Their resolution urged use of the property to privide "a suitable and sufficiently spacious building for normal school purposes." Frank C. Merritt, chairman of the meeting, said the facilities at Wilson Normal School were overcrowded.

The proposal followed a similar request by the Board of Education issued after the hospital was transferred to Glenn Dale, Md. Playgrounds officials also have sought use of the property to serve several nearby schools.

The resolution called attention to the value of the site as an educational center, near Roosevelt High School, Macfarland Junior High School and several grade schools.

Opposition of the group to having a hospital on the property dates back 25 years to the original construction of the tuberculosis hospital on that site.

Copies of the resolution will be sent to the Commissioners, the Federation of Citizens Associations and neighboring associations.

Brookland Citizens.

The Brookland Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution protesting increase in the District budget over the current figure of $46,000,000. The resolution stated the willingness of the group to support a $48,000,000 budget if the increase is essential for school facilities.

The Brookland citizens also went on record against additional real estate taxes, recommending a sales tax and fees for out-of-town students at District schools.

Discussion revealed sentiment against the automobile weight tax, gross receipts tax and license fees for professional men.

Marvin M. McLean, chairman of the association, told members local businesses are making more money than similar firms in any other part of the country, and must recognize they will pay heavy taxes in one form or another. He said he believed, however, that the sales tax was the most equitable method of raising funds.

Henry I. Gilligan, member of the Board of Education, spoke on the activities of other citizens associations in covering their communities with covenants against sale of property to colored persons.

Hillcrest Citizens.

Adoption of a resolution opposing issuance of retail liquor licenses in the vicinity of Stanton School featured last night's meeting of the Hillcrest Citizens Association.

The association also adopted a motion calling for affiliation with the District Suffrage Association.

Officers of the Hillcrest group, all renominated last night for 1937-38, include Charles F. Foster, president; George Absher, first vice president; C. L. Scott, second vice president; J. I. MacGregor, treasurer, and H. W. Rickert, secretary. Foster and Robert Worrell again were nominated as delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Southeast Businessmen

Opposition to the business privilege tax was recorded at a meeting of the Southeast Business Men's Association, held last night under the chairmanship of Clarence F. Donohoe, president, at 314 Pennsylvania avenue southeast.

The association already is on record as favoring a sales or income tax.

Affiliation with the District Suffrage Association, was approved Richard English, Vernis Absher and Louis Frick were named delegates to the meetings of the suffrage group.

A resolution was passed advocating the proposed magistrates' court for the District.

The association voted to sponsor at its own expense a community Christmas tree, to be erected at Pennsylvania avenue and Seventh street southeast.

West End Citizens

Deferring final action on the business privilege tax to a later meeting, members of the West End Citizens Association last night expressed general opposition to the impost.

A resolution was passed requesting the superintendent of parks that trees be planted on Seventeenth street between Pennsylvania avenue and H street.

A. C. Barber, retiring secretary, was thanked for his five-year service to the association, which also recorded its regret at the death of Frank Dowling, former vice president.

The following officers were elected:

Kalorama Citizens

The Kalorama Citizens Association last night voted to urge repeal of the business privilege tax in the 1939 revenue act and to recommend substitution of a selective sales tax.

Their action came after they had heard Robert D. Marshall, president of the Warehousing and Refrigerating Association, denounce the tax as unfair and as injurious to business.

A resolution was adopted asking that non-resident school children be made to pay tuition for attending District schools. Efforts to raise funds for school lunches were indorsed.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, president of the association, appointed John L. Proctor, Mrs. George Luers and Mrs. John Morrey members of a nominating committee to return a slate at the next meeting.

Stanton Park Citizens

The Stanton Park Citizens Association, on motion of its secretary, W. J. Bartle, adopted a resolution asking legislation be enacted which would bar non-resident school children from District schools.

The legislation was urged both to decrease the tax burden and to relieve overcrowding in the schools. It was pointed out in debate that, according to Dr. Frank W. Ballou, 2,495 non-resident children in schools here cost the District $194,567 annually.

Another resolution asked that the Capital Transit Co. be made to pay a $102,000 bill which has been presented the District Government for repaving streets after removal of streetcar tracks.

Harry N. Stull was re-elected president of the association. Other officers named last night were Mrs. W. M. Bartle, first vice president; Curtis Chadwick, second vice president; A. M. Panzer, treasurer; William J. Bartle, secretary, and S. M. Chipley, financial secretary. Stull and A. H. Gregory were elected delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

Crowd Urges Cheaper Milk In Arlington

Dairymen Say Business Is Injured; Farmers Also Suffer.

Civic Leaders Testify as 400 Attend Meeting at Courthouse.

Four hundred citizens of Arlington County, angered by a rise in the price of milk, yesterday gathered at the Arlington Courthouse and demanded the Virginia Milk Commission except the county from its price-fixing regulations.

The children of many poor families, it was charged, are getting less milk since the price was boosted by the commission.

Dairyman W. A. Hazel, who for six years has been distributing milk to 2,000 families in the county, joined in urging that Arlington be excepted from the price-fixing program.

He said he had been charging 12 cents a quart for milk. Then, he said, in July the Virginia Milk Commission forced him to raise the price to 14 cents a quart. As a result, Hazel said, his business had fallen off 30 per cent.

Hazel said the farmers who produce the milk also have suffered. He used to pay them 26 cents a gallon, he said, but under the commission's program he has to pay them 25½ cents. Since the higher retail price has reduced his business, he said, he has been forced to reduce his purchases.

Philip Rosenfeld, appearing for the Highland Farms Dairy, informed the commission his client was opposed to any form of price-fixing, especially as it affects the retail trade in the Arlington area.

The dairy, he said, wants to furnish milk to the residents of Arlington County at 11 cents a quart, and is ready within an hour's notice to supply all stores in Arlington County and Alexandria.

Hhe said his client is paying producers a higher price than that set by the commission. He filed petitions asking relief for this area, signed by more thna 750 of their customers.

William D. Medley, Arlington County delgate to the Assembly, told the commission he and State Senator John W. Rust and Maurice Rosenberger, delegate from Alexandria, are in favor of the Arlington area being eliminated from the regulations of the commission.

A. B. Parry, appearing on behalf of the citizens, said he felt the Highland Farms Dairy should be allowed to sell its milk at 11 cents a quart.

A. D. Adams, member of the executive committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation, with a membership of 31 oganizations representing about 3,000 families, submitted resolutions asking the commission to eliminate price-fixing regulations for the county.

John Paul Jones, past president of the Arlington County Young Democrats Club, submitted figures from the commissioner of revenue's office.

Dime Lands Clerk In D. C. Court on Embezzling Count

Quite a collection of detectives and a single dime took Robert Nimetz, 34-year-old grocery clerk into police court yesterday.

Nimetz pleaded not guilty and asked a jury trial on a charge of embezzling the dime from his employer, Morris Heckman, of 4449 Connecticut avenue.

According to detectives, Heckman said he had missed sums of money over a period of time and said he had employed private detectives to gather evidence. These, he charged in his warrant, turned up the dime.

Detective Sergt. Eugene Davis of the check squad made the arrest on the warrant obtained by Heckman.

Several Hundred Due To Become Lawyers

Several hundred candidates who have passed the June bar examinations and have been certified to Chief Justice Wheat of the District Supreme Court are expected today to appear in the clerck's office, take their oaths and become full-fledged Washington lawyers. Each must pass a character test before approval by John Paul Earnest, chairman of the admission committee.

After taking the first oath, successful candidates may be sworn to the bar of the United States District Court of Appeals. Three years hence they can apply for admission to the bar of the United States Supreme Court.

Wilson School Trafficlub Due To Form Today

Safety Movement Among Students Indorsed by Dr. Ballou.

The second assembly to bring about organization of "Trafficlub" groups in District high schools will take place at Woodrow Wilson High School at 9 a. m. today.

The movement, sponsored by the American Automobile Association and designed to bring about safer traffic conditions in Washington, was given wholehearted support yesterday by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

In pledging support of school authorities, Dr. Ballou said: ". . . There is no field today in which the need for civic consciousness is more sorely needed than in that pertaining to traffic safety. It is my hope that "trafficlubs" will be as effective in the high schools as the school patrols have been in assuring the safety of younger students in the elementary schools."

Driver testing devices will be on hand at the assembly today at Woodrow Wilson School and pupils will be given surveyor's instruments to study dangerous intersections near the school.

"The record of younger drivers and younger pedestrians," Dr. Ballou said, "has been of the worst in traffic accident reports. The fact that students of high school age realize this, and are determined to improve this record, is evidenced in their voluntary action in forming trafficlubs."

Formation of the clubs was launched Friday at Western High School and the assembly was attended by William A. Van Duzer, director of Vehicles and Traffic; Richard M. Ham, director of safety for the AAA District of Columbia Motor Club, and Inspector W. E. Holms of the Metropolitan Police Department. Other schools plan to hold assemblies and it is expected that the clubs will be functioning as safety units in the next ten days.

The hundreds of suggested names for the giraffes, Komodo dragon, lady orangutan, shoebill storks et al., which have been submitted since the competition opened September 30, will be judged by the following:

Dr. Hugh M. Smith, internationally known zoologist, former head of the Bureau of Fisheries and an authority on the fauna of Siam, whence came the king cobras, gibbons, clouded leopard and many others.

W. D. Boutwell, chief of the editorial division of the Office of Education.

These three will have full power to pass on nominations as they see fit. If none of the name suggestions is deemed suitable for a certain animal or animals, the judges need take no selection in that bracket.

For the benefit of late-comers, this is just a sociable contest to pick names for outstanding members of the valuable wildlife aggregation which the National Geographic Society-Smithsonian Institution Expedition brought to Washington two weeks ago—a Komodo dragon, pair of black leopards, pair of shoebills, pair of Himalayan bears, Chinese alligator, a lady and a gent orangutan, etc. Also the pairs of giraffes, pygmy buffalo, Asiatic wild cattle and blue sheep which will arrive in the Capital tomorrow morning.

Ruhland Cautions Barbers Who Use Soiled Equipment

District barbers who have been lax in observance of the health department regulation regarding barbers' instruments and towels "must suffer the consequences of court procedures," District Health Officer George Ruhland announced yesterday.

It is unlawful for barbers to service a customer with "any towel or wash cloth that has not been laundered and boiled since last used," or to use an unsterilized brush or comb, he reminded.

Saturday a barber was brought into Police Court and fined $25. According to a sanitary inspector, the barber used a soiled cloth to wipe the face of a customer.

Ammonia Fumes Drive 2 From Ice House Here

The rescue squad was called last night to the American Ice Co. plant in the 1000 block of Nineteenth street northwest where ammonia fumes, set loose from faulty apparatus, had driven out two employes, Karl von Rathvon, engineer and his assistant, Washington Garfield, colored.

Von Rathvon insisted that he wasn't overcome but admitted that he'd "got more fumes than I could eat." Neither he nor Garfield required treatment.

Capital Burglar Argues Own Case In Appeals Court

Covington, Ky., Oct. 11 (AP).—William E. Bedell, of Washington, D. C., will step from a Federal prison to argue for his freedom before the court of appeals tomorrow—but there were indications the freedom might be short-lived.

Bedell is confined to the Milan (Michigan) Reformatory, serving a three-to-five year term imposed in Washington in 1932.

Bedell contends that his term already has expired, because of time served during which an appeal was pending.

Budget Office For D. C. May Be Requested

Reorganization Group Expected to Ask Control by City.

Final Draft of Report to Be Made Before November 1.

Organization of an independent municipal budget office will probably be recommended shortly by the reorganization committee of the District government.

Appointed more than six months ago by the Commissioners, the committee, headed by E. Barrett Prettyman, former corporation counsel, has been engaged in a study of the District government.

It is expected that the committee will suggest many needed improvements.

One of these improvements, according to several prominent members of the committee, would result in depriving the Federal Budget Bureau of powers relating to local expenditures.

A final draft of the report will be made before November 1, it was learned yesterday. The draft also will include proposals for new legislation.

The District Commissioners would receive the power to create a budget office of their own which would not receive setbacks from the Federal Government concerning local financial requirements.

Indications were that the Prettyman committee has not voted on all of the suggested recommendations. It was learned that other proposals would be forwarded by the committee giving expansion in authority to the Commissioners.

Plan for Breeding Super-Manhunter Interests Officials

Police officials in several parts of the country yesterday expressed deep interest in plans for crossing a Great Dane with a bloodhound in hopes of producing a "supermanhunter."

George A. Coulson, owner of Erie, a Great Dane, weighing 190 pounds, said he had received several telephone calls from out-of-town police officials. He said he presumed they were stopping off here following a police chiefs' convention in Baltimore.

Eric is to be bred with a bloodhound owned by Capt. R. R. Pegelow, trainer of the famed pack used at the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va.

Coulson and Pegelow hope the hybrid offspring will have the keen sense of smell and trailing powers of the bloodhound and the size, strength and aggressiveness of the Great Dane.

Disney Creates Rare Illusion In Color Film

Feature in Cartoon Form Required 81,200 Total of Drawings.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Oct. 11.—Out on Hyperion avenue, in a movie studio liberally plastered with gigantic mice in red pants, something new in movies is in the making—a full length, full color feature film, whose characters are all moving pictures in the truest sense of the word.

Production started on "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" in 1934. It's nearly finished now, but it won't be released until January, four full years since the cameras began to click.

That's because the last bit of action had to be painted in water colors for the process used by Walt Disney, creator of the celebrated mouse. There are seven reels in the new film and that means that Disney's artists had to paint exactly 81,200 separate pictures, not including the ones they threw away.

The film has no resemblance to the cartoons now appearing on movie screens. Snow White, the heroine, for instance, is a beautiful girl, a movie painting, really, without any touches of caricature about her. Prince Charming, the hero, is painted as a handsome young man.

To Be Taken Seriously.

Disney intends that the characters and the film itself be taken seriously, and if his painted thespians threaten the popularity of such folks as Joan Crawford and Clark Gable and all the other flesh and blood actors, so much the better as far as he is concerned.

His picture is going to have a third dimensional quality, which makes depth apparent on the screen and which tends for the first time to turn cartoon-process films into real works of art. We know, because we saw a sample today, and we're still walking around feeling amazed. There simply is no other existing artistic medium with which to compare this new film technique.

"The Old Mill" was the title of the first film ever to be made with Disney's new multiplane camera, which makes possible the illusion of depth on the screen, and simultaneously paints it with colors more subtle than ever before.

Painting Comes to Life.

The first shot showed the old wind mill—much like a Dutch masterpiece—standing motionless in the dawn, with sunlight glinting its vanes. Then it began to move. The color followed through, the birds fluttered about it and it seemed as if an oil painting suddenly had come to life.

For good measure Disney displayed several of his newest cartoons (still unreleased for general showing), and including the one which recently won the prize as the best short picture at the International Exposition in Venice.

The cast of this one includes Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, Pluto the Pup and assorted fish, octupi and other fauna indigenous to the south seas. The title is "Hawaiian Holiday" and the grand climax comes in Pluto's tussle with a sophisticated lobster.

Disneyania note: All the drinking glasses at the studio are decorated with Mickey Mice; so is the flashlight the watchman uses after dark!

Music Is King In Hollywod Movie-Making

There's music in the air over Hollywood these autumn days with every major studio pouring its top talent into the production or preparation of at least two, and in the case of Paramount ten, important musical pictures.

Never before have the headliners of opera, radio and the musical stage found such urgent demand for their talents in Hollywood. And in the backgound an army of songwriters, arrangers, scorers, dance directors and orchestra men is busily manufacturing ammunition for the musical front.

Highlight event of Hollywood's musical week was the launching of Gladys Swarthout's latest picture, "The Yellow Nightingale," in which the Metropolitan Opera beauty is co-starred with John Boles and John Barrymore. Richard Hageman, noted conductor and composer of the Metropolitan, was brought West to direct the music.

Well into production is the rollicking "Big Broadcast of 1938," which offers W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour and a host of specialties, including the world operatic celebrity, Kirsten Flagstad. Nearly ready for the screen at Paramount are B. P. Schulberg's "Blossoms on Broadway," starring Edward Arnold, and "Thrill of a Lifetime" with the Yacht Club Boys, Betty Grable, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, et al.

Bing Crosby's next, based on O. Henry's "Badge of Policeman O'Roon," is almost ready for the cameras, and Jack Benny is back from Europe to launch his next starrer, "Music Over America." Four other musicals are in preparation, including the Burnes and Allen extravaganza, "College Swing," and a huge production based on the life and melodies of the immortal Victor Herbert.

M-G-M has "Rosalie" before the cameras with Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell, and is preparing "Girl of the Golden West" for Eddy and Jeanette MacDonald. Twentieth Century-Fox is shooting "Love and Hisses," the new Bernie picture, and has just completed two other musicals with Eddie Cantor and the Ritz Bros. RKO is shooting on two, one with Fred Astaire, the other starring Lily Pons, and is preparing another for Astaire and Ginger Rogers. Warner Brothers is producing "Hollywood Hotel" with Dick Powell and Universal is at work on Busby Berkeley's "You're a Sweetheart" with Alice Faye and George Murphy. Both studios are preparing other musicals.

And so, there's music in the air, over Hollywood!

Washington Is Lagging Behind Rest of Country In Catching the Films Held "Best of the Month"

Only Two Pictures of Preview Committees' Choice of Seven Seen Locally to Date; Future Bookings Give Promise; New Bethesda Theater Begun; Subscription Books Open at National; Theater Notes.

ALTHOUGH it probably will catch up before very much more water flows under the bridge, or over the dam, or wherever it is water goes, Washington, at the moment, seems to be lagging a bit behind the national procession of motion picture first-run releases.

BELL.

Which is to say that, according to the October 1 issue of the valuable brochure published by the Will H. Hays office to celebrate the films' "Best of the Month," between September 1 and October 1, 1937, the country's preview committees have been privileged to view a considerable list of screen plays not yet made available to the Capital's eager and eagle eyes. The consensus of opinion of the West Coast peekers-in-advancers hits upon five pictures that are appraised as outstanding and the East Coast arrives at a similar unanimity with regard to two. This makes seven "bests," of which the National Capital has seen only two.

The Westerners hit upon these as foremost of the month's output: "First Lady," a camera version of the Jane Cowl stage hit, starring Kay Francis; "It's Love I'm After," with Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland; "One Hundred Men and a Girl," "The Prisoner of Zenda," starring Ronald Colman, with Madeleine Carroll and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and "Something to Sing About," starring Jimmy Cagney. The Easterners are content to bestow the accolade upon "Stage Door," the picturization of the Edna Ferber-George S. Kaufman stage success, with Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adlophe Menjou, and "Victoria the Great," Herbert Wilcox' English-made celluloid recapitulation of the reign of Britain's beloved Queen, with Anna Neagle, in the title role, Anton Walbrook and H. B. Warner.

Of these productions, singled out for especial distinction, Washington has seen only "One Hundred Men and a Girl" and "Something to Sing About," oddly enough both musicals, and, not so oddly, both heartily approved by discriminating local audiences.

powers-that-be to hustle up a bit with "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Stage Door" and "Victoria the Great." Every advance portent is that they are very hot numbers, as we say among the best people. Not that the others necessarily are weak sisters, but merely that their rooting sections haven't been quite so well equipped with megaphones and cowbells—no relation!

However, there is still a dab or two of the well-known old balm left in Gilead. The Warner Brothers resident executives break out five titles that should do pretty well by Thirteenth street and the village burghers when they are unfurled in front of the Earle during the next five weeks—the titles, not the burghers. First of the quins, opening Friday, is "The Life of Emile Zola," in which Paul Muni and his splendid supporting cast will be seen for the first time in town at popular tariffs. This is one of the cinema's supreme jobs. Then will come, one suspects more or less in the order named, "The Awful Truth," transcribed by Columbia from the gay stage comedy, with Irene Dunne and Cary Grant costarred; Mervyn LeRoy's "The Great Garrick," dealing with a highly hilarious episode in the life of the distinguished English actor of the eighteenth century, impersonated by Brian Aherne; "Angel," the Ernst Lubitsch production, starring Marlene Dietrich, with Herbert Marshall and Melvyn Douglas, and "The Perfect Specimen," starring Errol Flynn in his first modern-dress role since "Green Light." Not bad.

Prospective golfers anxious to take the slice, or the hook, or both, out of their drives should be warned that the practice course that used to be out on the Rockville pike, just beyond Bethesda, near the East-West highway, isn't there any more.

Ground has now been broken on that site for the new theater-shopping center project to be operated under the direction of Sidney B. Lust, who seems intent on encircling the Capital with a chain of outlying motion picture houses. A name for the newest of the Lust enterprises will be determined by a popular contest, the nature of which will be announced soon. John Eberson, New York architect with several Washington playhouses already to his credit, is designer of the plant, which is being erected by the Woodmont Realty Co.

The theater will have a seating capacity of 1,000, as previously has been made known here, with parking space for 500 cars in the rear of the shops that will surround the amusement place. Every modern appointment and convenience will be incorporated in the new house—air conditioning, unique lighting effects, a stage for living entertainment, etc.

It is expected that the new property will be ready for public dedication within five months.

It was a concise, illuminating and well-delivered address that V. F. Calverton delivered yesterday on the character of Nazism and Fascism and the methods of their spread, at the Variety Club's second luncheon of the season in the Willard Hotel. The speaker pinned the growth of these prevalent "isms" upon three indispensable factors—extravagant capitalistic financial backing for the creation of "mercenary armies," and "God idea," translated from supernal into mundane terms, and the "hypnotism of hate." This analysis of the overseas development of the movement was intensely interesting in its clarity and logic, even if it was marked by an inescapable overtone of Communism. Mr. Calverton's subtly veiled warnings were rousingly applauded by those in attendance, to whom he spoke intimately, frankly and, at times, vehemently.

To add to the promise of future screen weeks, already partially outlined in these dispatches, Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's—one of the "kings for a day," along with Harry Brown, of Grand National Films, at yesterday's Variety luncheon, by the way—comes to bat with a recital of Fifteenth street's immediate outlook.

One of Master Meakin's most important items, perhaps, is his assurance that "Victoria the Great," about which we have been fretting so unnecessarily, will be his major feature the week of Friday, October 22, praise be. Among other Gargantuan gelatine he sees in the offing are "Breakfast for Two," the opus in which Barbara Stanwyck gives Herbert Marshall a black eye—least in the offing of any of them—"Fight for Your Lady," in which John Boles, Jack Oakie, Billy Gilbert and Erik Rhodes probably do for Margot Grahame; Bert Lahr, Jimmy Savo, Alice Brady, Mischa Auer and Dave Apollon's Orchestra in "Merry-Go-Round of 1938," and "Hollywood Screen Test,' 'a featurette showing how to go about getting in the movies, in case you want to get in the movies.

With a handsome subscription list of more than 5,200 Washingtonians already on the books, the local office of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington, in the National Theater, announces that subscriptions still are being accepted for the remaining five plays of the current subscription season. These will be headed by Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in Giraudoux' "Amphitryon 38," next attraction at the National, and probably will include "Tovarich" and "Yes, My Darling Daughter," two of last season's Broadway hits, and the Guild's new plays, "Wine of Choice," by S. N. Behrman, adapter of "Amphitryon," and "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," by Sidney Howard, in which Ethel Barrymore will return to the boards. Other "added starters" may be offered after the six subscription plays have come and gone. Now's the time.

Josephine Huston, featured on the stage bill at the Earle this week, has purchased a mountaintop in Bucks County, Pa., since her last visit here. She bought it as a site for a future home, with George S. Kaufman, Paul Whiteman, Dorothy Parker, Edna Ferber, Pearl Buck and Margaret Sullavan among her neighbors. Now all she has to do is figure some way to get up to it and back down again, in case of forest fire. There is no road.

• • • •

Succor-for-Those-in-Distress Note.

As accomplished a soprano as Miss Huston always could get up by hanging onto one of her high notes and, in case of emergency, could slide down again to "The Good Earth," after "Dinner at Eight," on Miss Ferber and Mr. Kaufman's "Stage Door"—or shall we just drop the whole thing?

Reunited in Screen Comedy

Having played with particular effectiveness in a subtly gruesome melodrama of a homicidal young Irishman's murderous impulses—that would be "Night Must Fall"—Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell next will swing to the opposite extreme in a gay comedy known by the title of "Live, Love and Learn." This enlivening item from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios will be coming along to an F street screen in the reasonably near future.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Oct. 11.—A letter in this morning's mail from a fond mother in Seattle, who incloses snapshots of her off-spring — an 8-year-old son and a 6-year-old daughter — and generously offers me a percentage of their earnings if I will just arrange for them to get into the movies. She confides that both children have amazing talent and can become greater stars than Shirley Temple and Freddie Bartholomew if only someone will give them a chance.

DICK POWELL.

I receive five or six duplicates of that letter every week—and the desks of the producers groan under the weight of missives from optimistic parents who are perfectly willing to let their children become screen stars at a starting salary of, say, $1,000 a week. It would be ridiculous—if it were not such a touching exposition of parental love and pride. In every part of the world, parents who have seen Shirley Temple's pictures are making sacrifices in order to send their children to dancing schools, singing schools and dramatic schools. Perhaps one child in a thousand does have the peculiar sort of talent that Hollywood demands—but even so that child's chances of ever being a screen star are one in a billion. Hollywood already is swarming with movie kids and not one in a hundred earns enough to recoup the street car fare that its mother spends scurrying around from casting office to casting office.

If you think your child has talent—and if you have a child you do—try to get him a chance in amateur theatricals in your own town. If he is good enough, Hollywood will find him there.

The postman who goes for a hike on his day off, and the sailor who takes the girl friend rowing on the lake, are both pikers compared to the average actor. Visit Johnny Star on the set and the odds are 10 to 1 that you will hear him beef about the "monotony" of his existence. "I'm so damned fed up with everything about this studio that I'm just living for the finish of this picture and the chance to get away from it all," he will tell you. And then, a week later, with his picture "in the can" and Johnny as free as the breeze, there he invariably is, wandering around the studio like a lost soul or sitting in the studio cafe, listening while his pals do their beefing. Peter Lorre is the champion of the lot. When he is working, the director never can find him for his scenes; as soon as his role is finished, he is on the set ten hours a day, making suggestions and criticizing everything and everybody.

Dick Powell—who has less to worry about than most people I know—is, nevertheless, Hollywood's No. 1 agonizer. He worries about his publicity, about the starting date of his next picture, about his dialogue, about his voice and about the scenario. I have watched him make hundreds of good scenes, but never have I seen him satisfied with his own work. The other day I visited him on the set and, just to dispel his gloom, told him that everyone in the studio considered the current opus a sure-fire hit. "Maybe you can quit worrying," I suggested. "What's one picture?" Dick mourned. "It will be just my luck to get a lemon for my next one!"

Chatting with a typical Hollywoodite today when Irene Dunne drove by. "There," said he, "goes the most mysterious woman in Hollywood!" From his rambling explanation I gathered that he considers Irene a woman of sombre mystery because she does not fit into the Hollywood mold. "You can't tell me that any star is the home-loving, unpretentious person that they try to tell you she is," he argued. Well, I didn't try to tell him either, but I wish he could see Irene making tomato preserves. And I wish he could taste the preserves. They have a wonderful flavor but not one speck of mystery.

New Candy Store Moves on Wheels

Latest studio gadget to make its appearance is a miniature truck, a perambulating combination candy store and soda fountain.

The vehicles made their appearance on Universal's large studio plant in the San Fernando Valley. They travel from stage to stage, catering to the sweet tooth of the electrician, carpenter, property man, actor and director. The trucks are small enough to drive right in on the sound stages.

Dave Butler, directing Alice Faye, George Murphy, Andy Devine, William Gargan and Ken Murray in "You're a Sweetheart," the new Buddy DeSylva musical, will not allow any member of his cast or crew to spend a cent with the driver of the soda fountain on wheels.

"This is on me," he yells, as soon as the truck makes its appearance on the stages. Actors and crew take what they like—and Butler is presented with the bill.

Big Film Caravan Goes on Location

A location caravan, consisting of 10 automobiles, 8 trucks and 2 huge busses, has just left the RKO studios for the San Bernardino Mountains, where outdoor scenes will be filmed for Ginger Rogers' new solo starring picture, "Having Wonderful Time."

A complete summer camp has been constructed in the mountains, with 35 rustic cabins, a recreation hall, a boathouse, a pier and a broadcasting station.

Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who will play opposite Miss Rogers, will join the company later this week.

Punch Is Good, Aim Only So-So

When Dick Baldwin, new romantic discovery at Twentieth Century-Fox, lets go with a fist he packs plenty of power but a wild aim.

For a scene in "Love and Hisses" he was to swing at Ben Bernie and sock him in the eye. During rehearsals everything went smoothly, Baldwin pulling his punches so that he wouldn't hurt Bernie.

But when the camera started rolling, Baldwin became excited and swung a "haymaker" which went wild by a foot, hitting Warren Mace, who was standing along side of Bernie, and knocking out a front tooth.

After that it required several "takes" before the old maestro would stand still enough for Baldwin to connect.

Play Room Built For Picture Set

Correct in every detail, a replica of the "play room" of the houseboat of one of America's leading millionaire sportsmen is being used as a set for one of the big scenes in "You're a Sweetheart," in which Alice Faye and George Murphy are starring under David Butler's direction.

Features of the setting are, in addition to the general nautical atmosphere, a bar and back bar of sea-blue glass, a glass-topped table supported by glass-and-chromium pillars which enclose marine compasses, brass ships lanterns and ropes of white spun cellophane.

Niven sent his shirts to a Chinese laundry, but was unable to pay the $4.50 bill . . . Two days thereafter the Waldorf lobby seemed to be crowded with Chinese gentlemen, appearing mysteriously from behind palm trees and from corridors. The management summoned Niven, and asked him how come . . . "Oh, its nothing at all," he explained. "The Tongs are just having a treasure hunt" . . . "A treasure hunt?" the management asked. "And what are they hunting?" . . . Niven confessed: "ME!"

HEALTH DEPT.: Billy Rose, who is producing his "Show of Shows" in Fort Worth, Tex., accompanied Gov. Alfred on a tour through some of the ranches in that part of the country . . . The Broadway-pale Rose, who put 300 oxen and 350 steers into his last production, watched 6,000 head of cattle roam in an inclosure large enough to hold a hundred centennial shows. Rose stared in fascination and envy. "Well, I'm glad to see some color in your face," the Governor told him—"even if the color is green!"

BEAUTY DEPT.: Lou Holtz, who made a sensational debut at The Frolics, has been in show-business for more than 20 years. Two weeks ago he was signed by Dave Selznick for Selznick-International Pictures . . . Selznick, however, loaned the comic to Warner Bros.—in exchange for Errol Flynn!

White Sox Rally in Third to Beat Cubs ,6-4, and Take Series Lead

MARION BROWN WINS MIDDLE ATLANTIC GOLF MEDAL

The Washington Post Sports

This Morning

Blue Plate Special, or Potpourri

By Shirley Povich.

To Whom It May Concern:

An invitation to the Yankees' Victory Dinner, scheduled for the night of the fifth World Series game, was delivered by special messenger to Manager Bill Terry, of the Giants, a half hour before the game started . . . when the Yankees took a two-run lead in the fifth inning, the invitations were released to baseball writers in the press box . . . the party that Col. Ruppert tossed for his ball players and the guests set him back a trifling amount estimated at $10,000 . . . the lid was off, what with Manager Joe McCarthy, Ruppert and their ball players bending the elbow in each other's presence with no qualms whatsoever.

POVICH.

Coach Lou Little, of Columbia, confesses that last Saturday's was the most agonizing afternoon he ever spent . . . he sat on the Lion's bench and watched Army wipe out a Columbia lead of 6-0, saw the Lions take the lead again, 12-7, saw it erased, 14-12, thought he had the game won when the Lions went ahead, 18-14, and nearly swooned when Army won in the last quarter, 21-18, . . . Little unhesitatingly declared that Jock Sutherland, of Pitt is the ablest football coach in the country . . . Sutherland will tell you that the Nation's best football coach is Lou Little, of Columbia.

Joe Engel, new owner of the Chattanooga Club, has been trying to break down Walter Johnson's resistance and sign him as the Chattanooga manager . . . without success . . . Engel's last sou is invested in the Chattanooga franchise . . . but he will have a profitable season if he can get the club's 2,500 stockholders to attend the games regularly . . . under the terms of the sale Washington must turn over four players to Engel . . . Freddie Sington, a .381 hitter in the Southern League, is the chief object of Engel's desires . . . Griffith is still rueing the day he turned down the Giants' $40,000 offer for Sington . . . to say nothing of rejecting the Cubs' $41,000 bid for Pitcher Dick Lanahan.

Petey Sarron, recently returned from South Africa, where he campaigned for a year, found gold in them thar African hills . . . his purses totaled nearly $100,000 . . . Sarron, who successfully defended his world featherweight title in four South African fights, bagged a baboon on one of his hunting excursions . . . the little Syrian this month fights Henry Armstrong in New York for the championship, and since New York fight critics have observed him in workouts, the odds on Armstrong are rapidly receding . . . win or lose, Sarron will receive the largest purse he ever earned for a single fight.

New facts about Slinging Sammy Baugh: He didn't get the name from football, but was tabbed as "Slinging Sammy" on account of the great throwing arm he brought to the Texas Christian University baseball team . . . Baugh played third base . . . in four years of football at T. C. U., and in four games with the Redskins, Baught has never been on the receiving end of a forward pass . . . so he says he really doesn't know what he's asking those guys to do when he aims a pass at 'em . . . he never even received honorable mention on the Texas all-high team when he played for Sweetwater . . . he likes Coach Ray Flaherty of the Redskins because Flaherty lets him run the ball occasionally.

That was an unselfish act by Lefty Gomez in the hour of his triumph over the Giants in the final World Series game . . . Gomez ran over to first base to take a throw from Lou Gehrig for the final out of the series, but Gehrig made the putout unassisted . . . as the Yankees broke for the clubhouse, Gehrig flipped the ball to Gomez, who likes to keep such things as mementoes of his victories . . . Gomez put the ball in his hip pocket and dashed for the dressing room . . . he overtook Second Baseman Tony Lazzeri en route and flipped the ball to the veteran second baseman . . . who, everybody knew, was playing in his last World Series and probably would like to have that ball . . . especially since Lazzeri was the leading hitter of the '37 World Series.

The most interested spectators at Madison Square Garden's rodeo are those among the 150 cowboys and cowgirls who do not happen to be competing at the moment . . . and it's not an act as they watch intently while some hard-bitten fellow lassos, wrestles and hog-ties a steer in 16 seconds . . . the world record is 11 seconds . . . It was not act, either, the other night, when one of the performing cowhands was gored by a steer he was trying to ride. . . . The fellow had five ribs broken and will ride no more . . . he died a few hours after they carried him out. . . . The cowboys gamble, too, on themselves . . . it costs 'em $100 to enter each event . . . the winner can make as much as $3,500 in prize money each week. . . . The death of the cowhand last week proved a boon to the rodeo, with New York's morbidly curious tilting the gate to new records . . . rodeo and Indianapolis Speedway fans are somewhat of the same ilk . . . agreeing that it would be too bad if anybody were killed,

Victors Make 8 Hits Count In Close One

Carleton Fails, Retires in Seventh; Brown Halts Rally.

By Earl Hilligan,
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Oct. 11. — Jimmy Dykes' White Sox, with the top of the batting order providing the punch when hits meant runs, came within a game of winning their fifteenth Chicago championship today, defeating the Cubs, 6 to 4, at Comiskey Park before 11,575 spectators.

The victory gave the American Leaguers three wins to two for the National League representatives, giving the Sox a chance, through another triumph tomorrow at the same park, to take their fourth straight city baseball crown.

The Sox were outhit, 11 to 8, but their safeties were more timely and they fielded snappily on several occasions when the Cubs threatened to take command. Little Mike Kreevich, who put the Sox ahead in the first frame with a long home run, drove in another marker in the seventh. Batting in the No. 3 spot behind Kreevich, Dixie Walker punched home two runs, as did the next man in the Sox batting list, Rip Radcliff.

Chisox Sew It Up.

The Cubs mixed two hits and an error by Monty Stratton to knot the count in the third, but the American Leaguers came right back for two runs in their half of that inning, getting them after two were out, and never were headed. The victors picked up a single run in the fifth and two more in the seventh. The Cubs' second and third runs came in the seventh, when Stratton, without getting a man out, retired in favor of Clint Brown. The final National League marker came in the ninth on Joe Marty's homer into the leftfield stands.

Carleton, in losing his first game of the series to counterbalance his victory in the opener last week, allowed six hits in as many innings, the other two Sox safeties being off the veteran Charley Root, who entered the contest in the seventh after Carleton had retired in favor of a pinch-hitter. Stratton chalking up one victory in his first series start, allowed eight safeties, the other three Bruin singles being off Clint Brown, who worked the final three frames.

Brown Halts Rally.

Brown, entering the game in the seventh with one run in, none out and first and third occupied, forced the next batter to hit into a double play, Bonura to Appling to Bonura. One run scored, but Brown ended the most serious Cub rally to get back into the game by making Hack pop out to end the rally.

When Kennedy, whose three-hit pitching gave the Sox the second came of the series, tomorrow will oppose Larry French, the Cub southpaw who hurled four-hit ball in subduing the Sox in the third encounter.

Steele and Apostoli Renew Feud in Non-Title Fight in New York Garden on November 12

A 'Natural'

FRED APOSTOLI.

Middleweight 'Natural' Expected to Jam Gotham Arena.

By Jack Cuddy.
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 11.—Freddie Steele and Fred Apostoli, those two Pacific Coast claimants of the world middleweight championship, were matched today for a 12-round nontitle bout at Madison Square Garden on November 12.

Promoter Mike Jacobs said, "this will be the best middleweight scrap staged in New York since Harry Greb and Mickey Walker fought in 1925. It's the greatest 'natural' in any division."

Jacobs' right-hand man, Bill Farnsworth, who had been negotiating the match since Apostoli stopped Marcel Thil, of France, on September 23, predicted, "it will sell out the Garden for a gross gate of $52,000. Steele and Apostoli will split 50 per cent of the net."

Steele, the brown-haired mauler from Tacoma, Wash., who is recognized in the United States as world titleholder, insisted upon a nontitle tilt because he still has nearly five months leeway in which to defend the crown. He made his last defense about six weeks ago when he knocked out Ken Overlin, of Richmond, Va., at seattle. A champion is required to defend only once every six months. Steele won the title from Babe Risko at Seattle on July 11, 1936.

Apostoli, San Francisco's handsome battling bellhop, is recognized as world champion in Europe by virtue of his technical kayo over Thil. The Frisco Kid insisted upon a title engagement with Steele, "so we can see who's really champion."

Apostoli claims he can beat Steele, although the Tacoma Tagger won a tenth-round technical knockout over the California Italian on April 1, 1935. Apostoli explains that he was far ahead on points in that bout, when he suffered a badly gashed brow, causing the bout to be halted. "Besides, that was one of my early fights."

After considerable bickering over terms, Eddie Miller, Steel's manager, and Larry White, who pilots Apostoli, agreed on their ends today. Both managers are in town, as are the fighters. Apostoli remained in New York after the Thil fight, and Steele arrived just before the World Series started.

Because it is a nontitle bout, the pricipals have agreed to enter the ring scaling between 161 and 165 pounds. The middleweight limit is 160.

Just Another Medal for Marion

Miss Marion Brown, Manor Country Club star, yesterday won the medalist honors in the Women's Middle Atlantic championships at Indian Spring. Miss Brown is shown here with the trophies she won in the recent Post tournament.

Seabiscuit's Purses May Top Season

Victory in $10,000 Race Today Would Exceed War Admiral.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 11.—With first place on the year's money-winning list within his grasp, C. S. Howard's mighty Seabiscuit faces a dozen worthy rivals tomorrow in the $10,000 Continental Handicap, mile and a sixteenth feature of the National Columbus Day turf program.

The 4-year-old son of Hard Tack, beaten only in the Narragansett Special since losing the rich Santa Anita Handicap by a nose last February, has earned $143,530. Victory tomorrow will give him a clear lead over War Admiral, which won $144,620 before injuring himself in the Belmont Stakes early in June. Seabiscuit's winnings for the years he has been racing total $185,035.

The Western-owned colt, purchased for $7,500 as a 3-year old, faces no easy task, although he showed speed in his workouts at Rockingham Park. He has been asked to pick up 130 pounds and give from 13 to 30 to his rivals. Second in the weight assignment at 117 pounds each are Hal Price Headley's Preeminent, a top-notch sprinter, and Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Caballero II, the Argentine-bred 5-year-old whic at times has shown plenty of class.

Two of the lighter weights—Arnold Hanger's He Did and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin's Strabo—figure to offer the sternest opposition, however. The 4-year-old He Did, winner of the 1936 Santa Anita Derby, gets in with 112 while Strabo, a stretch-running 3-year-old picks up only 107 pounds.

Among the other nominees are: Chanceview, Danger Point, Thorson, Pasha and Moonside.

District Stadium Near, Club Hears

Washington's dream of a suitable sports center with an outdoor stadium and indoor arena has progressed beyond the dream stage and may become a reality in the near future, Col. Dan Sultan, District Commissioner, told members of the Touchdown Club yesterday at their weekly luncheon.

Although Col. Sultan did not dwell at length on his subject it is known that efforts are being made to obtain PWA funds to begin work on the project. It will include a huge outdoor stadium capable of seating 100,000 persons; a smaller stadium with a pool, and another for tennis. A huge armory, suitable for housing indoor games, will be included in the project.

Soccer Leaguers To Meet Tonight

Under the presidency of Richard S. Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds, the Recreation Soccer League will meet tonight at 7:30 o'clock to arrange its schedule for the season, with the opening games due next Sunday.

Eight teams are expected to be in line, including Sun Radio, last year's winners; Heurich's, Marlboro, Italian A. C., Young Democrats, Taranto & Wasman, Maryland A. C. and possibly Bolling Field.

Applications from other clubs will be considered at the meeting, which will be held in room 313, District Building.

Tony Lazzeri May 'Retire' As Player

Star, Contract Troubles Face McCarthy as Season Ends.

By Bill Boni,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 11.—Like a man either embarrassed by the extent of his riches or content to let well enough alone, Joseph Vincent McCarthy turned aside all inquiries today concerning the future both of his world champion New York Yankees and of himself as manager.

Winner of three world series, the last two in succession, in the seven years since he took over the managerial portfolio at the Yankees' "house of hits," McCarthy was busy all day making preparations to head back home to Buffalo, N. Y.

While Mrs. McCarthy was packing in their Manhattan Hotel, her husband visited the stadium, conferred with George Weiss, head of the American Leaguers' farm system, and attended to other bits of business connected with cleaning up the tag-ends of a successful season.

He was extremely non-committal. His third contract with the Yankees, which called for the top managerial salary of $35,000 a year, expired this year.

But, according to Joe, he hadn't the faintest notion when negotiations for a new one would be taken up. He hadn't, in fact, had time "to give it a thought." But he isn't worrying. If his boss, Col. Jacob Ruppert, hasn't already assured Joe the news will be good, he will do it soon.

Tony Lazzeri's announced intention to make this his last campaign as an active big leaguer, an intention that may have been shaken somewhat when the veteran San Francisican turned up as the lead-

Score Best-Ball 63 at Manor, Sweeps to Al Houghton.

Eddie Stevens, Manor's assistant professional, and Tommy Corwin, coholder of the club two-man team title, paired perfectly yesterday to win the Middle Atlantic pro-amateur at Manor, with a best ball of 63 strokes, 6 under perfect figures.

Al Houbhton, Old Point Comfort, Va., who will defend his Maryland Open title on Wednesday at Woodholme, won individual honors in the pro sweepstakes with an even par card of 69, including a quartet of birdies. George Diffenbaugh, Indian Spring, was second to Houghton with a 70, while Bob Barnett was a stroke back at 71.

A pair of 65s took runner-up honors in the pro-am, Leo Walper and Volney Burnett splitting second money with a Baltimore due, Andy Gibson and Spencer Overton. The amateurs, Burnett and Overton, finalists in the State amateur over the same course, were the big guns of their teams, each scoring par rounds of 69.

A fourth place tie existed between Walper and Bib Albertus and Stevens and Ralph Gibson at 66 best ball. Eight teams tied at 67 and the amateurs split the prize, the winning duos including Johnny Bass and Overton, Mel Shorey and Felix McNally, Al and Billy Houghton, Willie Schreiber and C. A. Hook, Bob Barnett and Dr. T. M. Foley, Stevens and Dick Meyer, Diffenbaugh and Harry Peacock, and Diffenbaugh and Tom Belshe.

Stevens and Corwin, the latter using three of four alloted handicap strokes, were uncanny in their best ball score that was ten strokes lower than Stevens' individual. Four birdies by Treder's assistant, on six,

Shoots 82 to Take Tournament Honor Over Indian Spring Course; Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. Meckley Trail Leader With 86's.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Miss Marion Brown, The Washington Post match play and Manor Club championship winner in the last month, added to her links laurels yesterday by capturing the medal in the Middle Atlantic championship with an 82 over the Indian Spring course, four strokes ahead of her nearest competitor.

Trailing with 86s were a pair of former champions, Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, Elkridge Club, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, the tourney favorite from the host club, while other 90 breakers included Ella Kincaid, of Congressional, 88; Helen Dettweiler, Congressional, 89, and Mrs. Walter Stokes, of the host club, with 89.

Scores of 96 made the championship flight, with Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, Congressional, the lone top bracket player failing to make the grade. Mrs. Morrow and Mrs. Schluderberg, Baltimore, were the only out of town players in the first flight. The lone Virginia entry, Mrs. Wessells, Roanoke, was a stroke out with a 97.

Miss Brown, who is also a member of the Indian Spring Club, having joined in September, played fine golf on the first nine, out in 39, 4 over men's par.

After a quartet of fives on the starting holes, the blond Manor linkswoman played five consecutive holes in even par of 4, 5, 4, 4, 3. On the back nine she again started with fives on the first three holes, but settled to even men's par to sixteen, where she finished 6, 5, 5. The par 3 seventeenth was her only bad hole on the card.

Miss Brown played her round without the benefit of a putt of over 4 feet in length, but also did not have a three-putt green.

Mrs. Meckley's 86 was fashioned from a pair of 43s, including the starting of each nine with a six. Mrs. Morrow, the defending titleholder, was 41 and 45. Helen Dettweiler and Ellen Kincaid, who returned from the national championship a few hours before starting times, had respective nines of 45, 44, and 45, 43.

Leading pairings for today's first round matches include the medalist vs. Mrs. Myron Davy, Helen Dettweiler and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Simons, and Mrs. Morrow vs. Mrs. Rose.

Tapon Sits, Refuses To Run for Backers

Rockingham Park, N. H., Oct. 11. All money bet on Tapon, an entry in the eighth race here, was refunded today when he was scratched following a sit-down strike.

The horse came out but wouldn't go to the post, sitting down by the fence and refusing to get up.

Redskins Face Pirate Eleven Here Sunday

Invaders Boast Galaxy of Stars From Big College Ranks.

The Washington Redskins will drill hard this week for their next foe, the Pittsburgh Pirates, who last year were runners-up to the Redskins after a long and hard pennant chase. The Smoky City team meets the Injuns next Sunday afternoon at Griffith Stadium.

The pirates wil linvade Washington with a line-up packed with some of the most outstanding gridiron heroes ever to grace a college or professional gridiron. Mike Basrak, All-American center at Duquesne in 1936, will be flanked by a line averaging over 200 pounds, and these same linemen will open holes for such backfield luminaries as "Izzy" Weinstock, All-American fullback at Pittsburgh in 1935; "Tuffy" Thompson, of last year's Minnesota eleven; Byron "By" Haines, Washington University halfback star of last season's Pacific Coast Champions, and John "Blood" McNally, halfback and playing-coach of the Pirates.

"Blood" McNally has been one of pro football's greatest backfield men. Ten years with the Green Bay Packers and a member of that team when it won the Pro-Football Championship four times, McNally is looked upon by friend and foe alike as the best pass catcher in the game today, plus having no peer as a running back.

As colorful as a crazy quilt, McNally is noted throughout the league as a player who will do the unexpected at the proper time and pull football games "out of the fire" when the odds against him are greatest.

Lazzeri and Gomez in Tie for World Series Hero Role

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Oct. 11.—Nominations for role of World Series hero show it's tossup between Tony Lazzeri and Lefty Gomez . . . supposed to be all washed up and by his own admission ready to quit active play, Lazzeri topped all series hitters with even .400, getting at least one base hit in every game and starting the winning rally in final contest . . . Tony fielded his position perfectly, like all the rest of the world champions . . . Gomez pitched two artistic triumphs, putting him in record books with Herb Pennock and Jack Coombs for winning all five series starts . . . Lefty set a record by getting walked twice in one inning and enjoyed the distinction of driving in the winning run in the last game . . .

* * * *

Those Yankees shot our World Series prognostications full of holes as well as the Giants . . . did we say southpaws could stop murderers' row? . . . Three out of four portside starts fizzled as the great Hubbell alone succeeded once in two attempts to halt the carnage . . . Did we suggest the Giants' defense would be superior? . . . The Yanks played errorless ball throughout, for the first par ting last year, only 12 this time, but the payoff was on extra-base production, where the Yankees had a 2-to-1 advantage . . .

Joe DiMaggio's batting mark skidded to .273 for the series as he got only one hit, a home run, in the last two games but observers from far and wide acclaimed the Yankee sophomore as baseball's No. 1 outfielder . . . A few National Leaguers dissented in behalf of Ducky-Wucky Medwick of the Cardinals but for all-around ground coverage, throwing ability, and hitting power, the expert vote now is overwhelming for the pride of the DiMaggio clan . . . He still has a few laps to go before he can stand with Cobb, Ruth or Speaker but it's possible he may prove the greatest of them all before he's finished his big league career . . .

* * * *

Walter Johnson, all-time king of the fastball pitchers, says the only right-handed batsman he's seen with as much power as DiMaggio was shoeless Joe Jackson . . . and Arlie Latham, old-time National Leaguer who's seen the best of them, rates Jarring Joe as the best defensive outfielder he ever watched . . . so far as we are concerned DiMaggio is the only flychaser we have ever observed who gave the impression he's covering the entire outfield by himself . . . tip off on how much the Giants feared DiMaggio's throwing arm came in sixth inning of final game when Jim Ripple failed to go beyond second base on Hank Leiber's hard single

* * * *

Not much could be do. about stopping the Yankees, but look what's happening meanwhile to football favorites! Mid-October finds beatings already absorbed by Minnesota, Ohio State, Marquette and Michigan State, of the Midwest power squads; Southern California and Washington, on the Pacific Coast; Colgate, Columbia, Princeton and Pennsylvania, in the East . . . with Minnesota in a slump, the Big Ten race looks wide open . . . Cornell, with three major conquests, is the Eastern sensation after long years of football famine . . . California, on the West Coast, and Alabama in the South look to have powerhouses . . . Sharps are already picking them to meet in the Rose Bowl . . . Nebraska, having knocked off Minnesota, belongs in anybody's top flight . . . and Louisiana State appears to have another steamroller . . . Some of the best backs our scouts have seen go tearing by thus far are Todd, of Texas A. & M.; Luckman, of Columbia; White, of Colorado University; Frank, of Yale; Goldberg, of Pittsburgh; Baker, of Cornell, and Schindler, of Southern California . . .

Biologist and Over The Top Finish in First Dead Heat at Laurel

Bradley Entry Holds Upper Hand Until Rival's Late Dash.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 11.—In as thrilling a finish as has been witnessed at this track, Biologist and Over the Top drove to the wire as a team today and the judges, after consulting the picture, ruled a dead heat, the first even, winning finish of the season in Maryland. Tying up at the sixteenth pole, Biologist, owned by Col. E. R. Bradley and Over the Top, the property of the Tranquility Stable, strained every muscle in a struggle to the wire that had their hosts of backers standing on their chairs.

Once as rare as a perfect bridge hand, but fairly common now since the camera has come into use, the dead-heat was so apparent that those in the vicinity of the finish line called it before the numbers were flashed on the board. The two horses came together by different routes in the mile race, named the Easton Purse and the scheduled feature event.

Over the Top was away from the gate slowly, had to be steered wide while moving up gradually and then came on with a rush in the center of the track to lap on his rival and fight it out with dogged determination while Jockey Basil James drove him for all he was worth.

Biologist, on the other hand, held a contending position in the field of eight from the start. Jockey Joe Renick steadied him along while waiting for a chance to get to the front. Entering the stretch, Renick placed the Bubbling Over gelding to a drive and gained command. He shook up his mount with the whip and then settled into a powerful hand ride.

It was Over The Top which moved the fastest as the pair reached the edge of the jockey board. It appeared that Over The Top was going to bound away with the decision. However, Renick struck Biologist again and the gelding jumped along with his rival. Then came the wire.

The dead-heat pair carried like weights of 117 pounds and Biologist was the favorite by a few cents. The win mutuel money was split between the two in ratio to their play and Biologist paid $2.80 to Over The Top's $2.90.

London Opens Training Here On Thursday

New Yorker Will Arrive Then for Fund Bout With Gevinson.

Danny London, fast-stepping New York featherweight, will arrive Thursday to complete training for his ten-round bout with Lou Gevinson, District southpaw, at Griffith Stadium next Monday night for the Kiddies' Free Luncheon Fund.

London will set up training quarters at the Eleventh street gym randezvous for such scrappers as Irish Johnny Dean, who meets Cowboy Howard Scott in a ten-rounder on the Monday card; Ray Ingram, local southpaw, who faces Al Reid, of New York, in a six-rounder, and Baby Manuel, the Mexican flash, who is working for his six-rounder with Armando Sicilia, of Chicago.

The New Yorker's manager, Irving Cohen, already has sent a $300 forfeit check to the Turner-Ahearn concern for London's appearance. Cohen may use Ray Arcel in London's corner.

London's manager informed Matchmaker Ahearn that his protege has been promised a big match in New York if he stops Gevinson, and that "Danny will shoot the works" here.

Encouraging reports came from the free luncheon headquarters yesterday that the advance sale had passed $3,000. Numerous reservations are being made at the Arena, Fourteenth and W, and at Ahearn's branch office, Nineth and E. The committee, headed by Frank Buckley, is confident of a $15,000 gate.

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al:

War Admiral will start Saturday in the Laurel, a mile battle at $7,500 added. The Preakness-Derby winner will be opposed by Eagle Pass, Heelfy, Aneroid, Rough Time and others. The odds board in the centerfield was shortened and put into two sections. Henceforth the changes in the line will be made within sight of the customers. Before they were forced to virtually guess at the changes, James Neal succeeds C. Mitchell as trainer of the F. Haller horses. Jockey H. Keppler left for New York today to report to Freddie Hopkins, his contract employer. Palm Island has been put on the schooling list. Jockey L. Turner, who suffered a broken collar bone at Havre de Grace, returns to the saddle tomorrow. He rides for the Bomar Stable. General Manager Al Boyle wired from Charles Town that stall application should be made at once for the meeting which opened December 1. Andy Clutter, the apprentice who has been riding sensationally here, had only ridden 16 winners in his life when he reported to Laurel. He has ridden five here and is considered the most promising apprentice on the grounds. He can make 98 pounds and is 20 years old. His weight has been the same for two years, he says. Clutter's first winner was at Tropical Park last December. The horse was Blaken. His work here has struck the fancy of trainers and he promises to be kept busy. BILL.

First Race—Casa Manana has been awaiting the right spot and this may be the time to bear down. This One has worked well and is a good-looker. Flying Wild turned in a smart effort last out and is dangerous. Heraldic is going to win soon and has an outside chance.

Second Race—Bonnie Chatter was feeling out the course here the other day and should improve on a fast track. Longshot and Sun Scout are in good hands and both performed creditably last out. Head Hunter has a lot of weight but is due to be a factor.

Third Race—Fleeting Moon, in with 103 pounds and fit as a horse can be made, gets my call in this event. Combatant turned in a fine race here and will be in the thick of contention. Fore has some good races in the book.

Fourth Race—Sea Boy has been passed along to me as one with an excellent chance of taking it all in a field of this kind. I'm going to string along. Pernie and Blini to take care of the others.

Fifth Race—High Fleet packs 121 pounds but looms as the most probable winner in this field. Ran a smashing race behind Rough Time in the Capital Handicap and I see no reason for mistakes. The Millsdale entry of Bottle Cap and Mower should be prominent. Clingendaal for the show.

Sixth Race—Bootless has worked excellently and improved last out. Gets a nice shift in the weights here and could jolt the talent at good odds. Eagle Pass, a 3-year-old, is giving older horses weight but is too fit to be disregarded. The Millsdale entry for the remainder.

Seventh Race—Miss Marlboro has everything in her favor here and appears to be the best thing of the day. Buttermilk and Care For to complete the money bracket.

Eighth Race—First Pigeon earns his way in this sort of company. Needs only the right handling. Spur Flower, last on the also eligible list, will be a prominent factor if in action. Sylvia G. for a peak.

Best bet—Miss Marlboro.

Tech High Rules Heavy Favorite Over Green Western Eleven Today

T-Streeters Given Edge In Line Work

Game Gets Under Way at 3:30 at Western Stadium.

By Jack Munhall.

Tech High School, defending champion and favorite to repeat, makes its 1937 debut in the interhigh school football series this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in Western Stadium.

Minus the valuable services of Johnny Williamson, crack halfback who fell before eligibility rules, and despite losses in both previous games, Tech will rule a heavy choice to crush the green Western eleven. Tech has run against unusually strong opponents in early games which accounts in some measure for its surprisingly poor showing.

In the opening game, the T-Streeters met Maury High of Norfolk, and the Virginians won, 6-0, in a battle which could have gone either way. In its second start Tech, as did Eastern before it, had the misfortune to meet Episcopal High's undefeated, untied and unscored on powerhouse and bowed, 18-0.

Western, on the other hand, has engaged in but one contest and was routed, 42-6, by a strong Petersburg High School team.

Tech Has Veteran Team.

Thus it is that on basis of records, determining a winner between Western and Tech appears very difficult but by the more logical method of analyzing material some light on the subject can be obtained.

Tech will take the field with a veteran team, eight of the eleven tried and true in interhigh competition while Western has only two players with interhigh experience. Also, Tech will undoubtedly possess a marked edge in punting, for Quarterback Jack Belote has few scholastic equals in the art in booting, both for accuracy and distance.

Belote is also a passer and runner of note. Coupled with Belote in the Tech backfield are Henry Rassier, blocking halfbacks, and Joe Streets, the running half and Nick Zuras, a plunging fullback capable of making that needed yardage.

But if good backs will decide this game then Western certainly will be in the fight for four periods. For in Morris Snead, all-high quarterback, and Don Nicholson a fleet halfback, the Red Riders have a pair hard to equal in high school ranks Snead, very fast and a deceptive runner, was as good a ball carrier as this city ever boasted last season.

Unfortunately when Snead and Nicholson are counted off, Western's experienced players are tabulated. In the backfield Dickie Lynham, a baseball star, has seen scant action in interhigh competition, playing but a few minutes last year. Fullback Carroll Price, fourth member of the starting backfield, lacks experience as do most of the linesmen.

It is in the line that this game will be decided and it is in the line that Tech will have a great advantage. Back from last year are a powerful pair of tackles, Jake Fleishman and Donald Sclaugh, both scaling better than 200 pounds; three equally good guards, Charley Callas and Sharkey and Burgess, and two experienced ends, Bittenbender and Connoly. William Miller, center, is experienced but in scrimmages and games has shown himself worthy of the balance of the forward wall.

The Line-up.

Western's tentative line-up follows: Ends, Stanton and Hanlon, and Thompson and Nance; tackles, Broadman or Zinchman and Thomas; guards, Pappas and Reed or Metcalf; center, Haring or Reed; backfield, Snead, at quarter; Lynham or Schanshur and Nicholson at halves and Price at full.

Dutch Whaley's Scores Lead Federal League

Dutch Whaley's 13 game and 420 set was high in the Federal League last night, while investigation took team honors with 624, and General Accounting team set at 1,733, at Arcadia alleys.

In the Navy Department League, Frank Ontrich, of Lithos, 155 and 374 for game and set honors while his team was high with 573 and 1,663.

Stars of High School Team That Plays Here Today

When Western High and Tech march out on the gridiron this afternoon for their interhigh contest the spotlight will be focused on this collection of stars. In the photo are Western's varsity backs, Snead, Lynkan, Nicholson and Hill.

Terrapins Prepare Defense For Cagey Virginia Eleven

Cavaliers' Formations Resemble Mass-Meeting and May-Pole Dance; Death of Jim Meade's Mother May Deprive Team of Star's Services.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

A glum and puzzled Maryland eleven yesterday began preparations for Saturday's fray with Virginia at Charlottesville, a game that looms increasingly more important on the Terps' schedule.

The untimely passing of Jim Meade's mother Sunday at Port Deposit, Md., has deprived the squad of its ace back's services temporarily, at least, and he may be out of Saturday's game. Coach Frank Dobson said he will leave the matter entirely up to Meade, who is not expected back in school until Thursday at the earliest.

Out of Character.

Dobson stepped out of character yesterday and told his squad off in no uncertain terms as he drove it through a brisk and lengthy scrimmage. Blocking as demonstrated against Western Maryland came in for particular condemnation, and the lanky coach minced no words telling his boys about it.

Before scrimmage, however, the team looked over Virginia's tricky offense—as demonstrated by Al Woods' freshman eleven, and began arranging defensive formations to combat it. It is rather difficult to describe the various formations the Cavaliers use, but, briefly, they seem to be doing a May-pole dance, having a mass meeting to denounce communism, staging a fraternity initiation, playing crack-the-whip, and doing the big apple. It's all very disconcerting.

Dobson Fears Worst.

Maryland had a defense for every offensive formation, however, although Dobson isn't quite sure how or what it will do in actual combat. He fears the worst unless the Terps evidence considerable improvement over their performance against Western Maryland.

Woods scouted Virginia in its three games to date and reports Frank Murray's men showing marked improvement with each added start. The Cavaliers did nothing to hurt their cause at Annapolis Saturday, even though they finally were crushed by an alert Middy eleven. Murray has devoted the major portion of his time to offense and has it highly developed.

Middie Coach Plans Defense For Air Raid

Hardwick Maps Plenty of Work for Game With Harvard.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Oct. 11.—Convinced that Harvard, equipped with a danberous passing and running attack, is one of the two or three strongest teams which Navy will meet this year, Head Coach Hardwick, of the latter team, started the special preparations for Saturday's game in Baltimore with a lively practice in which defense against passes was stressed.

Harvard has been well scouted, as has Navy, by the Crimson, and the reports from Cambridge are that Navy will have to find some way of stopping a pass attack that is tremendously effective. Also, Harvard, the scouts reported, used with effect plays of the cross-check or "mousetrap" variety.

Bill Ingram, ace back last year, who was hurt in the Virginia game Saturday, is particularly needed, according to Hardwick, for his very fine defensive game against passing. It is expected that Ingram, who bruised his arm, will be ready to play by Wednesday.

May Mix Backs.

Hardwick will decide during the week what backfield he will start, and may mix the quartets which have been known as first and second, as he did on Satuday. Indications now point to the first backfield composed of Frank Case, Bill Ingram, Alan McFarland and Bob Antrim, starting the game.

Big Harold Hansen has been brought into the second backfield, and with Art Franks, another back of more than 200 pounds, will be in the blocking position, with Lem Cooke and Emmett Wood as running backs. Cooke, Hardwick said, is definitely the best ball carrier at present on the squad, and is sure to see plenty of work in the Harvard game.

Bob Antrim, back, who played all the way in Saturday's game, and Dick Fincher, center, who played in most of it, were kept out of the more severe work this afternoon, and tomorrow, a scrimmage against a B squad team coached in Harvard plays, is on the card.

Heber Player, former back, end and tackle, has been placed at left guard on the first varsity team, while Dick Gunderson, who scored a touchdown Saturday, is still in the fight. Lucien Powell, who subbed for Irwin Fike, regular left end, has been moved to right end, as regular Guyon, using the boy alternately at halfback and fullback. The Indian scored two touchdowns within a period of three minutes against La Salle, clinching his mates' well deserved victory in a very impressive performance.

Guyon started the year in disappointing style, but has developed slowly and last Sunday seemed to hit his true stride. He did everything asked of him and did it well, and if he continues to live up to that standard, one of Bergman's biggest problems will be solved, for "Dutch" has been sorely pressed for a man to fill in at both positions.

Two Injured.

Lou Shine, end, and "Sully" Greco, reserve fullback, are on the sick list and will be X-rayed today for possible serious injuries. Shine may have suffered a fractured shoulder in the La Salle game, while Greco's arm is thought to be fractured. Rocco Pirro, 200-pound fullback, is nursing a game leg, but will be ready for action this week.

Detroit's outstanding star, according to La Fond, is Ernie Palumbo, one of the Midwest's most dangerous forward passers and key man in the attack. Roger Hayes, a southpaw, is another dangerous chucker, and in Andy Farkas and Al Olivet the Titans have a couple of ball carriers who would look well in any backfield.

Cardinals Face Sternest Test Of Season in Detroit Eleven

Bergman Fears Titans May End Team's Winning Streak; Palumbo Ace Passer; Guyon Shows True Form; Shine and Greco Are Hurt.

With three straight victories under their bulging belts Catholic University's Cardinals are beginning to entertain visions of an undefeated season, but the outlook is blurred just a trifle by the spectre of the Detroit game coming up Friday night at Griffith Stadium.

Coach "Dutch" Bergman has had too many experiences with the tireless Titans to take anything for granted—especially anything so important as a victory over them. As Eddie La Fond, home after seeing Detroit crush Texas Tech, 34-0, using mostly reserves, isn't lessening his boss' worries. La Fond compares this team with the '33 edition, which walloped the Cardinals, 26-0, when the District eleven was supposed to be one of Bergman's best.

Has Even Chance.

But if Catholic goes as well Friday night as it did against La Salle it should have an even chance at least. Bergman is considering a shift in his backfield, involving Joe

POST NOTES ON Fishin' BY BILL ACKERMAN

From a local angler for whom we have the greatest respect, not only because he is a typical exponent of true sportsmanship in his use of light tackle, but also for his work as a conservationist and as an officer in the National Capital Casting Club, we have a letter, and publish it so that other anglers may keep their weather eye peeled.

Dear Bill:

I'm hot, and I think you would be, too, were you in my shoes.

Last Tuesday afternoon we lugged several bushels of messy alewives down to ——'s at Plum Point to take a last shot at the blues over at Sharps. Arrived well ahead of the agreed time, only to find we had no boat. Our captain across the bay with a party who because of bad weather on the two preceding days had been allowed to drop back on our time. Too late to go elsewhere and the evening lost along with several dollars' worth of chum and bait.

Something should be done about such practice; I bring it to your attention with the hope of saving other anglers the same disappointment. Sincerely yours,

* * * *

Well, Harold, we feel the same way about fleet captains who get their reservations balled up, not just once or twice but often, and because of like complaints early in the season, stopped recommending this point to fishermen; using instead the boats that dock just a short distance below.

ACKERMAN

Such practice will get a boatman in the end, and while it is tough on those so taken in, it is bound to make Christians of the other boatmen in the neighborhood. And, while we are on the subject, don't forget that it takes two to make any bargain; anglers should do their part by keeping the reservations after they have been held. Many times this summer we have found the repudiation to be on their side.

The first fall meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America will be held in the Oak Room of the Raliegh Hotel on Wednesday evening October 13th at 8 p. m.

Commissioner Frank Bell, United States Bureau of Fisheries will give a short talk on the activities and accomplishments of the Bureau during the past year while they are being projected on the screen and Elwood Seal will talk on the pollution of the Potomac.

Have you tried the yellow perch fishing? There is no time better than this month and next, for this scrappy little fellow that is found in almost every slow moving stream and pond in this section.

The marshes of the Patuxent are literally alive with them and what a workout they will give that two or three ounce flyrod. Once you get them shoaled and close to the top, the worms and grubs can be discarded in favor of a wet fly, fished just under the surface. Although on occasion they will break the surface to take a fly or insect, their preference is for underwater feeding.

Another good place is at Conowingo Dam, for during the year 1935-36, the Maryland Conservation Commission stocked ten million fry that were just under two inches in length at this point. They should be just right this fall.

* * * *

Drs. Holland and Curfoot, of our Public Health Service, had so much trouble this summer finding water that was clear enough to fish for small-mouth bass that they took to fishing for catfish with flyrods and have found it so productive and full of fun that it is doubtful if they will ever be weaned away from it.

They work the streams tributary to the Potomac above Chain Bridge on the Virginia side and generally that section of them from the road to the river. Hardly an evening but what the creel doesn't have several that run large—9 to 12 pounds and more. Little fellows of 4 and 5 pounds are about average, and it seems to be no trouble at all for these fishermen to nab eight or ten.

* * * *

Young Joe Fletcher called us up last week about a small-mouth bass that he had caught in the river the week before that weighed between 4 and 5 pounds. He and Ollie Atlas had cooked up a scheme to tag and release it in the Tidal Basin so that other anglers might have a shot at it and also get a prize for bringing it in, but everything was off when the fish died.

Our advice to Joe was to enter his catch in the Field and Stream contest, for a small-mouth that size has a chance in any company. We hope h did so.

Dollar to Hold At 59 Cents, Bankers Told

4,000 Members of A.B.A. Meet at Boston for 63d Convention.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Oct. 11.—Optimistic bankers, encouraged by reports of better business and mindful of a prediction that the dollar's value would remain stationary for some time, tonight "went to school" to learn better ways of knowing "Mr. and Mrs average citizen."

Three bankers — from Virginia, Massachusetts and Wisconsin — charted paths along the public relations road for delegates to the sixty-third annual American Bankers Association convention at a unique customer relations clinic. The "school" wound up activities preliminary to the first general session of the convention tomorrow.

Registration of delegates approached 4,000 tonight—and the incoming delegates brought messages of "better business" and "fine conditions" from many sections of the Nation. Convention officials predicted registration eventually would reach 5,000.

Speaking at the meeting of the national bank division of the association today, J. Franklin Ebersole, professor of finance at the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, declared the dollar probably would remain at its present value of 59 cents for some time. He said revaluation upward might be "politically embarrassing," being made to appear as a change of position reflecting upon the wisdom of an earlier position.

Prof. Beersole said that raising the value of the dollar "would destroy that grant of power to dominate which was conferred upon the Treasury by the gold 'profit' upon the original devaluation—to return merely to a 75-cent dollar would create a 'loss' nearly as large as the amount of gold now segregated in the stabilization and the inactive funds combined." He forecast a policy of drifting, or waiting, in the hope of a favorable turn of events.

Russell Gordon Smith, vice president and cashier of the Bank of America, San Francisco, was elected president of the National Bank Division.

Rudolf S. Hecht, chairman of the board, Hibernia National Bank, New Orleans, and former president of the association, presided at the customers clinic at which Jesse F. Wood, vice president of the State-Planters Bank and Trust Co., Richmond, Va., declared bankers must be more than "rubber stamp executives."

The Market

Stocks Decline to New Low Levels With Pressure From London; Bonds Lower.

New York, Oct. 11.—Stocks ran into steady selling and on a turnover of around 1,750,000 shares sold down to the worst levels of the last two years. Declines of 4 and 5 points among the leading issues were the rule at the low points. Almost no recovery took place before the close. Commodities also were lower. Wheat was hard hit. December futures at Chicago closed 4 cents lower at 96½ cents a bushel. United States bonds were mostly lower and speculative grades were shaken off with stocks.

London was given full credit for today's fresh decline in stocks. The market was particularly disappointing to those who have tried to maintain a cheerful front, inasmuch as they had predicted a rally as overdue. Houses here which had foreign orders found no great volume and some even reporting buying on balance, but liquidation in London before the opening here in American stocks, particularly in International Nickel and United States Steel, was heavy. A few assorted London firms were said to have weathered the last settlement day storm with considerable difficulty and in return for financial help were compelled to reduce their stock holdings.

London Liquidates.

Metal markets in London also were weak today and other European trading centers had rather a poor day. The Amsterdam Bourse did poorly and altogether sentiment on the other side toward our much heralded unbreakable business recovery was a little dreary. Stocks here fell 1 to 5 points to the lowest level of the movement. Rails, metals, steels and motors gave up the most ground. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown and Inland dropped 3 to 5 points. Chrysler, Nickel, Kennecott and General Motors receded 2 to 5 points. Santa Fe, Central, Northern Pacific, D. & H., and a few other rails dropped 1 to 3 points.

Oils, chemicals, rubbers, tobaccos and rail equipments yielded 1 to 2 points. Public utilities backed up large fractions, although Telephone tumbled 2 points.

As an offset to the Government's report on higher farm income for August, the further sharp declines in wheat and the weakness in cotton prepared the markets for higher estimates of crop yields for this year. The higher estimates was promised by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, for publication after the close of the markets. It was also noted that Secretary Wallace said that the larger crops to be shown in the estimates would be called to President Roosevelt's attention, so that the President would have a ready excuse at hand in case he wished to risk a special session of Congress.

Extra Session Bogey.

That side-door promise of an extra session by no means had a reassuring effect on stocks. No possible scheme that the Government is likely to think up will meet with much favor as capable of doing much more on balance than increasing the burder of the taxpayer and the consumer without bringing any lasting benefit to agriculture. At the same time Congress in session likely as not will go ahead with further legislation calculated to increase business gloom. Passage of the hours and wages bill, much beloved by the Administration, or of a higher taxation measure will not encourage the businessman to think he can risk his money for larger profits.

Extent of Decline.

The decline in stocks on the present movement, which began on August 14, reached 25 per cent for the industrial shares and 38 per cent for the rails. Industrial stocks are now down 29 per cent from their best of the year, reached March 8. Rails are now exactly 50 per cent lower than at their top on March 17. Comparative prices follow:

Restrictions.

A comparison of the declines in the London market and in the new York stock market since last March do not indicate that our markets have suffered particularly from restrictions peculiar to themselves. Rather the case on the surface suggests that both markets have responded to more important underlying conditions. The fall on the New York Stock Exchange since the first of March has amounted to a little over 27 per cent, compared with 15 per cent for the London market. Taking the generally narrower range ruling for London into consideration, the difference is not so great as it seems, and in any event a 15 per cent in the London market suggests that something more than SEC regulations for the New York Stock Exchange have been back of it. Without restrictions our decline in 1929 was more severe than was the fall in London stocks.

Steel Operations.

The report issued at noon Saturday showing a sharp drop in steel shipped by the United States Steel Corporation in September and today's estimate of the American Iron & Steel Institute placing the operating rate for the entire industry at 66.6 per cent this week, helped to send steel common to a new low price on the movement. The steel industry fell 3.8 per cent last week and is now well below a year ago, when the operating rate was 75.9 per cent of capacity. In 1935 the mills were running at a little better than half capacity. Steel mills usually run at a lively clip for some time after industry in general has begun to slacken, and that happened this summer. Likewise the steel industry is usually slower than other trades in feeling a turn for the better in business.

Steel Production Declines to 63.6%

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 2.5 points to 63.6 per cent of capacity, compared with 66.1 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 80.4 per cent of capacity, while a year ago the rate was 75.9 per cent.

826 Closed Banks Now Liquidated

J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, announces liquidation of 53 national bank receiverships during the month of September, 1937. This makes a total of 826 receiverships finally closed or restored to solvency since the banking holiday of March, 1933.

Total disbursements, including offsets allowed, to depositors and other creditors of these 826 receiverships, exclusive of the 42 restored to solvency, aggregated $298,614,646, or an average return of 79.85 per cent of total liabilities, while unsecured creditors received dividends amounting to an average of 67.95 per cent of their claims. Dividends distributed to creditors of all active receiverships during September, 1937, amounted to $3,806,979.

Total dividends paid and distributions to depositors of all receiverships from March 16, 1933 to September 30, 1937, amounted to $877,294,813.

U. S. Mortgage Bankers Gather For Convention

G. Calvert Bowie Heads Local Delegation to Cleveland.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Washington's delegation to the convention of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America in Cleveland this week is headed by G. Calvert Bowie, secretary of the H. L. Rust Co., and vice president and member of the board of governors of the national organization. The local contingent will include A. C. Houghton, president of E. Quincy Smith, Inc., and a past president of the Washington Real Estate Board; H. L. Rust, jr., William L. King, president of the Boss & Phelps Mortgage Co.; Harry M. Randel, representative of the Hartford insurance group in Washington; Col. Harold Lee, deputy general manager in charge of property management, Home Owners Loan Corporation; Paul J. Frizzell, deputy general manager, and Harry C. Peiker, an assistant general manager, of the corporation, Edmund D. Chamberlain, chief of its inquiry section, and Walter M. Hebb, vice president of Tyler & Rutherford, Inc.

Guest speakers who will address the twenty-fourth annual convention of the association have been announced by James W. Collins, association president, and the list includes Carroll B. Merriam, director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; Charles F. Williams, president of the Western & Southern Life Insurance Co. of Cincinnati; Gov. William I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, and Henry Bruere, president of the Bowery Savings Bank of New York City.

Myers a Speaker.

Gov. Myers will address the convention on the opening day, tomorrow, speaking on "Cooperative Credit: How It Is Operating." Mr. Merriam will speak on "What of Our Stewardship?" following the annual presidential address by Mr. Collins. The second day's session will be devoted to the organization's new "Appraisal Clinic." On the third day Mr. Williams will speak on "The Trend of Mortgage Investments," to be followed by Mr. Bruere.

New features of the convention this year include the "Appraisal Clinic" and examination of the farm chemurgy movement; the first annual Exposition of Building, Industry and Services, which will include exhibits by leading corporations and organizations and the usual "roundtable" meetings at which six well-known mortgage men will speak on various phases of mortgage banking.

"Our Cleveland convention will be the largest ever held in our nearly quarter of a century history," said George H. Patterson, secretary. "At least 1,000 will attend. The city real estate loan field is following the improvement in residential building, which explains the increasing interest in private mortgage lending and investing. It is significant that membership in the Mortgage Bankers Association of America at the end of our fiscal year ended August 31, 1937, was the highest ever recorded, higher even than during the building boom days of the twenties."

In a handsome new home, filled with floral tributes, the Morris Plan Bank of Washington, yesterday received the congratulations of hundreds of friends on its successful progress. The bank is now in its spacious new quarters at the northwest corner of Fourteenth and G streets northwest, in the center of downtown Washington.

This site, formerly occupied by the Commercial National Bank, is one of the prominent corners of the city, and its occupancy by the Morris Plan Bank will definitely add prestige to this location, while, at the same time, giving the bank much needed space.

Willard G. Barker, president of the bank, stated that its steady growth, year after year, and the installation of new departments for the convenience of its customers, made larger quarters a necessity. "The bright outlook for the future," he added, "prompted us to take this definite forward step."

The institution, which is a member of the District of Columbia and American Bankers Associations, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, opened for business in March, 1925, in smaller quarters near Fourteenth and H streets northwest. Its officers are Mr. Barker, president; B. Russell Shaw, vice president; V. Walton Rhine, cashier; Edwin H. O. Stokes, C. Crawford Turnbull, Elwood G. Childers, Samuel E. Collegeman and Ferdinand E. Walter, assistant cashiers.

Final figures for the fall semester enrollments in Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking classes have been announced by Paul J. Seltzer, educational committee chairman. Students from Washington banks and other financial institutions number 286, enrolled in classes ranging from elementary banking to advanced courses in investments and current economic problems.

The complete class enrollments are: Banking I, 102; law, II, 74; banking II, 41; credits II, 35; investments I, 18; current economic problems, 16.

The educational program for the year is well under way, and Chairman Seltzer is encouraged by the support given him by the District banks, and the response by the students to the call for more specialized training in the banking field.

Dollars and Sense.

The first issue of Dollars and Sense, publication of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, for the chapter's new administrative year has appeared and covers the report of William H. Laughlin, chapter president, as well as the recent national commencement address, broadcast by Branch Rickey, St. Louis baseball executive. The editorial staff for the new chapter year is composed of A. E. Henze, W. B. Hibbs & Co., editor; Miss Rose L. Royce, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; J. George Dagenais, Riggs National Bank; Kenneth Birgfeld, American Security & Trust Co., assistant editors, and Eldridge Kendrick, distribution manager.

Sugar Exports.

New York, Oct. 11. (AP).—Domestic refined sugar exports in the first eight months totaled 42,689 long tons, compared with 33,814 tons in the like 1936 period. An increase of 26.2 per cent, Lamborn & Co., sugar brokers, reported today.

Grains Tumble To New Lows For Four Years

May Wheat Drops 5 Cents Followed by Corn, Oats and Rye.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 11.—In a sensational collapse of values today, wheat, corn, oats and rye smashed low-price records that in some cases extended back to 1933. December and May wheat plunged down 5 cents a bushel, the full immediate limit allowed by trade rules.

Acute weakness of securities did much to undermine confidence among holders of grains. Heavy selling, apparently of a stop-loss character, on the part of houses with Eastern connections was a feature of wheat trade during the market downswings.

At the close, Chicago wheat quotations were 2⅞ to 4 cents under Saturday's finish; December, 96½@96¾; May, 97¾@97⅞; July, 92⅛. Corn, 1⅝ to 3½ cents off; December, 57⅛@57¼; May, 58⅜@58½; July, 59. Oats, 1 to 1¼ cents down; December, 28⅛. Rye showed 3 to 3¼ cents drop; December 71⅝. Provisions were unchanged to 52 cents lower.

U. S. Incomes Climb to Peak For Recovery

August Total Is 6.375 Billion, Only 5.3% Below 1929.

New York, Oct. 11.—The national income produced in the United States rose in August to a new peak for the recovery movement, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. It amounted to $6,375,000,000, as compared with the previous peak of $6,150,000,000 in July and with $5,269,000,000 in August last year. The increase over the income of a year ago was 21.0 per cent. This compares with a gain of only 11.7 per cent in July. The national income in August this year was the largest for any month since October, 1929. It was only 5.3 per cent below the monthly average for the full year of 1929.

The national income in the first eight months amounted to $47,734,000,000 this year, as compared with $40,075,000,000 in the corresponding period last year, an increase of 19.1 per cent.

It was larger than in any similar period since 1929. As compared with the income in that year, it was only $5,817,000,000 smaller. It is thus evident that the national income is close to the greatly inflated condition prevailing before the depression.

The probability is that the national income in September was larger than in August and the prospect is that another new peak for the recovery movement will be reached in October. It will not be surprising, however, if the seasonal decline during November and December is sharper than usual.

The price level in August was slightly lower than in July. Consequently, the increase in the national income was accounted for entirely by a gain in the quantity of goods produced which reached the highest volume this year and nearly attained the pre-depression monthly average in 1929. Mine production, factory output and shipments of agricultural products in August were all larger than in July or in August last year.

Cotton Steady; Trading Is Dull

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Cotton moved irregularly in quiet trading today. December, which had sold off from 7.90 to 7.82, later rallied to 7.97 and closed at 7.93 with final prices 3 to 8 points net higher.

The market opened 2 points lower to 2 higher, but after an accumulation of buying orders attracted by the late rally on Saturday had been executed, demand tapered off and prices sagged. Offerings were moderate, however, and after several hours of small price changes, the market rallied late in the day on covering. Final prices were at or within a few points of the best.

Bob Burns Says—

You hear a lotta talk about some Hollywood moving picture actors bein' conceited but I've found the average run of male actor out here is a pretty good sorta fella. Some of 'em would just get spoiled rotten if they didn't have a good level-headed wife at home to keep their feet on the ground.

One of these conceited actors was havin' breakfast with his wife the other morning when she spoke up and said, "You know, I had the funniest dream last night—I dreamed I was in a department store, where they was sellin' husbands and they had some of the finest lookin' husbands there I ever saw."

And he spoke up and says, "Did'ja see any of 'em that looked like me?" and she says, "No, I woke up before I got to the remnant counter."

Emil Jung, of 1426 Oak street southwest, and William Higgs, of 1910 Fourteenth street southeast, were hurt last night when their automobile struck another car near T, B., Md. Jung and Higgs were in an undetermined condition at Casualty Hospital.

Others injured yesterday were Alfred Tooney, 7, of 431 Fourth street northwest, who suffered bruises when he was struck by a trailer which broke from a car in front of his home.

Miss Beatrice Kelty, 40, and Mrs. Betty Baumgartner, 37, both of Washington, were injured in Baltimore yesterday when their automobile collided with another, overturned and skidded upside down. Miss Kelty received a possible fractured skull and three fractured ribs and Mrs. Baumgartner was treated for neck injuries.

3 Charged With Md. Murder Of Colored Numbers Runner

One of D. C. Defendants Fights Extradition, Other Taken to Upper Marlboro; Third, Said to Be Ex-Policeman, Is Sought.

Three men were charged yesterday in Prince Georges County with the murder of Sam Jeffrees, colored numbers runner, who died September 30 in a Washington hospital.

One of those charged waived extradition from the District, another refused extradition, and the third, said to be a former policeman, was sought as a fugitive.

Fred Schinman, 39, alleged policy boss, fought extradition when arraigned in Police Court and was held without bond by Judge Walter J. Casey. Frank S. Guy, colored, 42, of 30 G street southwest, waived extradition on the same charge. He was returned to Prince Georges County and lodged in the Upper Marlboro jail for trial.

Schinman was given 30 days to fight the extradition to Maryland.

Schinman and Guy were arrested here by Detective Sergt. Robert J. Barrett, who was working with Police Chief Arthur Hepburn. Hepburn said Schinman fired the shots which killed the runner and Guy is held as the fingerman wso pointed him out to his alleged slayer.

The former District policeman sought is said to have been the driver of the car which gave Jeffrees his last ride.

Jeffrees was shot allegedly for turning in books faked with fictitious names after he had learned the first digit of the winning combination of numbers by telegraph from the race track.
